Opening In pursuit of happiness

Day in and day out over 2,400 students came to LC with hopes of making new friends, having fun or just finishing up the last of their high school education. Despite being faced by both trivial and gigantic obstacles, LC pulled through every struggle, fought hard for every victory and challenged every student to the fullest.

Listening to passing conversations in crowded hallways, LC greeted each other, argued with each other, wrote notes, made plans for evenings and weekends and tried desperately to learn what they needed for their futures without taking even a bit of fun from their daily lives.

in a trivial pursuit...

And with the beginning of the school year came the rebuilding and establishment of many activities. Clubs began preparing for their annual festivities, while the various academic and athletic teams also started bulking up for area competition. LC's 2,400 capacity gym again saw anxious athletes who were in pursuit of making the team, while students strived to adjust to the daily class routine in pursuit of making the grade.

The LC parking lot once again saw busier than usual days as students rushed to get the last available spot in the morning or be the first ones to leave as soon as the 2:05 bell rang. Trivial matters such as these constantly played an important role in the lives of LC students. But in the end, where did a majority of the teenagers living in the tri-town area choose to spend four years of their life in pursuit of a diploma? Only at LC, of course.

Opening Pursuing a future of knowledge

Tiny trivial tidbits lingered in 2,508 minds, just waiting for the right moment to pop forth into daily conversations. Although the pursuit of knowledge, skill and happiness reigned as top priority, unimportant bits refused to stay buried.

How many french fries did Scott Berger, 12, really cram into his mouth at one time that first day back into cafeteria food?

Did people actually own 273 purple backpacks?

As soon as one puzzle was solved, wondering minds attacked another question. No matter how controversial the issue, LC pursued trivial knowledge.

about trivial matters

Which room was the hottest room in the school? Journalism students could vouch for the steamy 94 degrees during the first week of school, causing numerous computers to crash. And which was the coldest? According to Rachel Freebairn, 12, Mr. Roy Rutherford's room was always the coldest. "This is the coolest class you'll take," quipped Rutherford.

Why were we forced to use those (insert choice of adjective here) agenda books? Who used them to keep track of homework, anyway? And how many days does September normally have?

From the OJ trial, lasting nearly an entire year, to which actor was favored to win the Oscar-probably Tom Hanks, again-trivia composed most conversations. From the ordinary-

"How many Jeremy's does LC have?"

to the bizarre-

"How many hours of your life ticked away in the lunch line this year?"

LC remained in a trivial pursuit.

When times were hot (and sweaty)

The summer of 1995 was one of the hottest summers on record. Over 600 Chicagoans died in the sweltering heat. Relief was hard to come by during all of the confusion. Students took relief in pools, water slides, beaches, and their jobs.

The beach was one of the most traditional escapes for people of all ages. Attendance levels set records for all of the local beaches this summer. Alison Muntean, 11, said, "I spent most of my summer at the beach, just laying out."

The other happening place to chill out was Deep River Waterpark. "I thought I was going to die a couple of days out there. Thousands of people and all of that heat made me pretty crazy," said junior lifeguard Scott Brumm.

Many publicity stunts helped draw students to the amusement park. "I went to see Mancow at Deep River. I waited in line for six hours to see him," said Chris White, 11.

The most convenient alternative was a backyard swimming pool. "I lived in my pool for about three weeks when it was really hot," said Adam Taylor, 10.

Whether in a pool or a bathtub, the summer heat was felt everywhere. The pursuit to find relaxation was never-ending.

Dana Starcevick, 11, gives a look that shows how really hot it is outside at the Tippecanoe Park.

Enjoying the last days of summer, Alison Muntean, 11, heads out for a stroll through the water at Turkey Run.

That's how "Rumors" get started

Ken and Chris Gorman (Lisa Massa '88 and Matt Kennedy) were on their way to Charley and Myra Brock's tenth anniversary party when they heard a gunshot. Rushing inside, they found Charley on the floor with a hole through his earlobe, the result of a failed suicide attempt. Wishing to cover up the situation, to keep rumors from flying, Ken and Chris devised a plan to convince the other partygoers that nothing had happened.

Len and Claire Ganz (Cemal Ozedmir '90 and Janell Cox '93) arrived in confusion after demolishing their brand new BMW. Ken and Chris attempted to cover up the shooting, but eventually told them the truth. Soon after, Ernie and Cookie Cusack (Kendall Smith '77 and Amanda Diekman '90) arrived unaware of what had happened. Len broke the code of silence and told the Cusacks about the suicide attempt. Glenn and Cassie Cooper (Jason Utesch '94 and Holly Orr '95) arrived next, arguing the entire time. The other guest attempted to keep the suicide attempt under wraps but failed once more.

The police (John Fetsch '95 and Allison Felus, 11) arrived to investigate the car accident but got more than they asked for. Len agreed to portray Charley to cover up the situation. So, Ken agreed to be Len to fool the police into thinking nothing had happened. When the police refused to accept the fib, they insisted on speaking to Charley. Len appeared as Charley and made up a huge story about the gun shot. Oddly enough, the police bought the story which was totally a product of Len's imagination, or so he thought.

The Lowes decided, after some prodding from the cast, to bring back "Rumors" for a third closing night. Felus admitted, "The extra rehearsals were totally worth it. The audience loved it."

When times were cold (and freezing)

Chilling winds, sub-zero temperatures, icy roads. Were all these inclement factors responsible for keeping LC students inside during the winter? Never! This type of weather added something every student pursued—fun!

Whether making snow angels, building snow figures or engaging in exciting snow ball fights, where there was snow, there was adventure. Even though the sting of a snowball in the face may have hurt at first, the excitement of the whole escapade overshadowed any negatives. Rachel Pratt,11, said, "Some of my friends and I went to a park and played on the playground after it snowed. It was fun to slide down the slides even though we're not little kids anymore."

Winter was not the same for students, since nature was a little too generous with the amount of snow in the eastern states compared to Northwest Indiana. "I love snow and I wish Northwest Indiana would have gotten some more," continued Pratt.

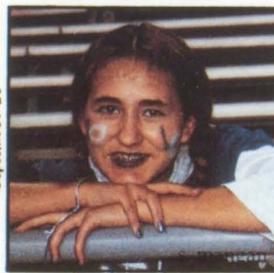

However, not one bit of fun was detracted from students' lives after the first signs of snowfall appeared. In fact, junior Katie Keilman was one of a select few happy that snow was scarce this winter. Tommy Toso, 11, had a different outlook on the effects of snow, especially on his car. He said, "The snow doesn't affect my car because it falls apart during all the seasons, not just winter!"

Seniors Ann Sarda and Lynne' Colbert take advantage of the newly fallen snow and a half day of school to make snow angels.

Enjoying one of the few snowy days, Shannon Mangan, 12, swings on a tire at a community park.

Gobble, gobble, gobble

In keeping with the tradition of generosity during the holidays, Interact prompted everyone to give a little of himself. Using paper plates with the slogan "It's not too late to fill this plate," they encouraged everyone to give a donation to those less fortunate.

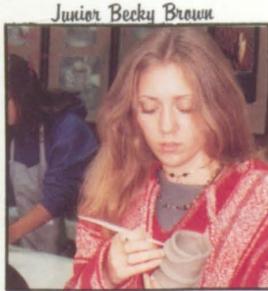

The propaganda succeeded. Students collected 39,404 items including money and canned goods. This number was under their goal of 50,000, but every bit was appreciated.

On Thanksgiving Day, several LC students decided to skip the annual day of football games and traveled to the Hammond Knights of Columbus to serve the needy from a soup kitchen. Between meals senior Matt Hensley entertained with his rendition of "Mama's Little Baby Loves Shortening Bread." Others chimed in on traditional Christmas carols.

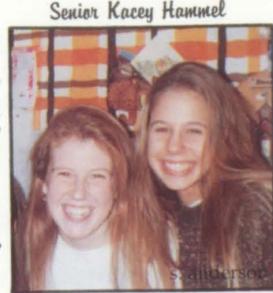

The experience definitely had a strong influence on students' lives. "It makes you appreciate what you have," said Rachel Freebairn, 12.

Pursuing recognition...

s. mangan

For the 2,484 youthful, but extremely brilliant students, LC proved to exhibit an abundant collection of trivial categories for them to conform into. Along with vegetarians, honor roll students, and band members, there were so many various clusters linked together, that LC truly created an unique atmosphere within each individual hallway and classroom.

Of course, there were those forever earsplitting, uncontrollable, and obnoxious students, who continually seemed to encounter trouble. There were students with such remarkable creative adeptness, that they could have devised absolutely anything, simply using a paper and pencil. Some possessed humor, intelligence, leadership, motivation, and capability. Others cast both lovely and radiant rays of excellence upon LC.

From freshmen to seniors, blondes to brunettes, singers to actors, distinction ranged among all students. With a multifarious number of differences regarding students, they could have been classified into indefinite divisions. Age levels, cultural differences, sizes, likes and dislikes, colors and reputations, accounted for some of the general groups, or the groups could have been broken down into specific sections, including math knowledge, favorite sports and hairstyles.

*N*o matter the students' sizes or colors of eyes, hair, or skin, they bruised themselves when they stumbled and fell; they were hungry when they didn't devour any food for a lengthy period of time; they giggled at something amusing and wept when the unfortunate occurred. All students, despite the non-stop work that was eternally present, preferred to squeeze in a tiny bit of fun and satisfaction at any cost. All students chose appropriate clothing for the school day and communicated with their friends and others.

*W*ith each fine point, trivial part, and itemized student account, LC guaranteed a diversity to each and every student, just as the students donated their distinctions between each other in return.

Are you... Normal Strange Really Weird

What surveys say about the typical LC students

Take a typical day in the life of every student who attended LC. Subject that day to statistical analysis; crunch those numbers and mix well. The yield presented a factual picture of just how your habits, tastes, talents and quirks stacked up.

6:30 a.m. The sun rose and (grunt) so did you. Then 48 percent of you neglected making your beds some days and 32 percent never made them. For 9 out of 10, it was into the shower. At least 97 percent claimed to take a bath or shower once a day; 4 percent washed two or three times daily. While males preferred the shower, 57 percent of females chose a bath.

Time to get dressed. You threw on your jeans and your never-fail blue shirt. More students chose blue as their favorite color, followed by red, purple, then black. Getting into those jeans found 67 percent preferring to button then zip, with the rest zipping before buttoning.

Your face could have used a little help. A very tiny thought themselves the fairest of them all, while 80 percent considered themselves as average-looking; 34 percent claimed they were unattractive. Only 13 percent described themselves as gorgeous.

7:15 a.m. Running late? Most said they were. They ran out and jumped into their cars, which 35 percent could not have lived without. Radios, stereos, phones and money were among the stop student necessities.

7:25 a.m. Ding... ding... ding. The warning bell sounded as you sped to your first hour, which was followed by five more classes, broken only by a 30-minute lunch. Ninety-one percent carried a book bag throughout the day, and most claimed B was their average grade while F was the least obtained grade.

Lunch! LC usually skipped breakfast, making lunch a necessity. On any given day 2 of 5 skipped breakfast, while 4 of 5 ate lunch. Students averaged $2 at day in the cafeteria, but 35 percent brought lunch daily. Sabatasso pizza required the use of a fork by only 12 percent, with the rest using their hands.

2:05 p.m. Yes! But where to? Most students went home after school, but nearly 1 in 2 students participated in school sports or activities. Track won as most common sport for both males and females; the class cabinets were the most common organization. Many other students went to their jobs. More students worked in restaurants than any other place, and LC students averaged $4 an hour in pay.

In your car and homeward bound and hopefully collision-free, 82 percent sang along with the radio. Only 40 percent sang in the shower earlier that morning. But accidents did happen. About 70 percent confessed that if they dented another's car, they would face into the night, but females were more strongly bound by their ethics. Fewer than 3 in 10 claimed they would have left a note on the windshield.

4:30 p.m. Snack time! Oreo cookies found favor, with 23 percent eating them plain and whole, while 30 percent twisted them apart; 36 percent dunked them, usually in milk. Others tried to eat more healthy foods by choosing the virtuous option—fruit. Statistics prove apples as the favored fruit, followed by bananas, oranges and strawberries.

Dinner out provided a meal of choice. Hands down, the favorite restaurant food was french fries, with 22 percent of all restaurant meals including them. Hamburgers were the second most popular with 17 percent ordering them. Most drank milk with their dinners. Some 45 percent of suppers included a glass of the white stuff, compared with 38 percent who opted for soda.

11 p.m. More than likely you climbed into bed with your shorts and t-shirts (84 percent). Far fewer slept in pajamas or nightgowns.

Body tricks

From easy to near impossible

Can you snap your fingers?

You'd think all students could, wouldn't you? But 2 percent of students can't.

Can you curl your tongue?

4 out of every 5 students surveyed can.

Can you whistle?

Almost 4 in 5 students can whistle, about 79 percent of students.

Can you touch your nose with your tongue?

Maybe lizards can do it, but fewer than 1 in 10 can reach the tip of their nose with their tongue.

Melissa Wyckoki, 10, practices her boxing skills before a fight with fellow sophomore Kyle Kwasny, who later won.

Rosi Alvarado, 12, sneaks a wink. Most students sleep 6 1/2 hours, 1 1/2 hours less than the recommended 8 hours.

Ball State English Day

Traveling a total of eight long hours on a cold bus sounds like fun, right? No way! However, although this year's Ball State English Achievement Day Team had to undergo that experience, it was not enough to prevent them from improving upon last year's third-place finish. In fact, the team brought home a second-place trophy along with, according to several of the individual winners, some pretty nice Ball State sportswear.

The annual event, held Feb. 24, provided students interested in various English aspects to compete in different contests. Grammar, vocabulary, expository writing, world literature and research strategies were the areas of testing, which compared LC's students to about nine other schools. Sponsor Ms. Penny Tokoly said, "English Achievement Day is a rigorous academic competition. In order for a team to do well, each member has to be focused and give the competition his or her best effort."

That effort helped many students to win in one or more categories. Expository writing proved to be LC's strongest area, with senior Brad Rohrer gaining honorable mention, Sara Johnsen (12) winning third place and Casey Andrews (11) capturing first. Rohrer also placed first in the Creative Writing contest for the short story he had previously submitted. "Writing is our team's strongest skill, and we placed well in the competition. A look at our team members will show that we were represented by Lake Central's finest writers," commented Tokoly.

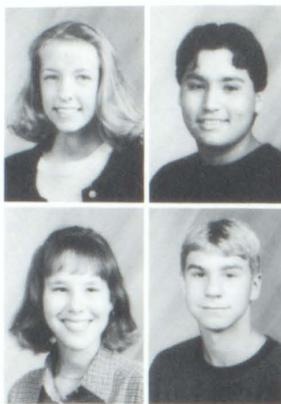

Another highlight of the team's day was the first-place finish of the Research Strategies Team, which included Kristen Bogner (12), Lars Bergstrom (12) and Eric Rueth (11). The research team also won first last year.

In the vocabulary area, Johnsen and Jon Eller (12) won the second and third place awards, while senior Stephanie Fisher and junior Andy Krop won third in grammar. Team members were pleased at the event's outcome. Eller, who was also a member of last year's team, said, "Being a part of the competition was great, but the part that makes it the most fun is spending the day at Ball State with your friends. I was really happy with the team's finish, and I think everyone did a really great job."

I

In the search for electives some students looked for a way out of hard classes and extra hours after school. There were also students that looked forward to electives that required hard work and dedication. Chorus has long been a popular class for LC students to participate in.

As students made their transition from the middle school to the big time some looked to choir as a fun elective. "When I scheduled for my classes, I decided to sign up for choir for fun. After I got into the class, it was even better than I expected," said Pamela Troupis, 9. Freshmen were divided into one of two Jr. Treble Choirs.

Students participating in their second years were moved into varsity choir. However, some students were placed in Sr. Treble Choir for their ability. The highest level for the choir classes was Concert Choir. The other possible outlet for chorus students to explore was Bell Choir, which was divided into two separate classes.

The choir held four performances per year. Fall, Christmas, classics, and spring were the main themes for the concerts. There were a number of performances for each season. The performances were a showcase for all the choirs.

Every other year the choir classes take a big trip to compete in national competitions. This year the classes traveled to Atlanta which was also the host city to the 1996 Olympics. On the off years the choir travels to Great America for competition.

"I think traveling with all of my friends just adds to the enjoyment of choir. By joining choir, I combined two of my favorite things, singing and traveling," said Dominic Corsello, 12.

JUNIORS

AT A GLANCE

Ryan Zentz
Chris Zilz

We're finally upperclass now! We had those two boring years of not doing many things, and now we're free. Being a junior brings on many privileges. We finally can drive ourselves to school, are able to go to Prom, and have only one more year of high school to look forward to. Juniors are also given many responsibilities. Planning for college, and taking those long, hard SAT's also happened. Junior year is the hardest academically. It was a time to pay attention in class because most colleges look at your junior year grades. Being a junior was hard but also a blast.

Pursuing all the facts...

In between having fun and going out with friends, LC students concentrated hard on school. Homework, projects and assignments took up spare time, while speeches and term papers also provided stress.

During the week grades were on the minds of those hoping to pass that one test that would give them the percentage to pass the class. Then there were the others who passed all classes with a breeze, especially world affairs, which was cited by most students as the easiest class.

The class that gave many a struggle was physics. Ms. Stemp's calculus class was one of the memorable classes for students looking back on their high school careers. Sociology and U.S. History were also esteemed highly as interesting classes.

Starting freshman year, students struggled to achieve good grades and be in the top of their class by graduation. In the senior class 16 percent were on the principal's honor roll, which meant they obtained a grade point average of 3.66 or higher, while 21 percent were on the regular honor roll. This meant they obtained a g.p.a. of at least 3.0. Who had the higher g.p.a?

c. graham

Well, out of the top 50 seniors, 40 of them were girls and 10 were boys. Ninety-five seniors were in honor society. And the highest g.p.a held by a senior last year was 4.6502.

So, students seemed to be able to have fun and also keep up their grades at the same time. Some students attended classes at the Hammond Career Center. Sixty-five to be exact. They attended these classes to explore the particular career of their choice. Cosmetology, machine shop and cooking classes were just a few of the many available. After high school, however, 36 percent of the girls and 30 percent of boys attended college.

The combination of school and fun did not seem to phase students one bit. After school and weekends remained time for students to get together with friends and have fun, but during school, students were always in pursuit of learning more.

Thinking once again

No talking! No sleeping! Was that a note you just passed across the aisle? Don't even blink your eyes!"

When that ugly, irritating, vaguely familiar sound threatened our preferred hours of slumber Aug. 22, we were only minutes away from the inevitable start-up. All appeared normal: Seating arrangement, classroom rules. Classroom rules? Now those can completely cramp your style! According to Melissa Golon, 9, "Teachers don't let us do anything."

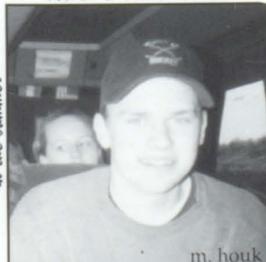

Some focused better with stricter rules. Jenna Perez, 9, said, "Some of my teachers are strict about the rules and some are not. The teachers that have strict rules care about teaching their material. The teachers who were not strict cared, but just not as much. I found that I learned more from strict rules that teachers make me stick to."

Those who tried drinking milk from the carton in a foods class were forced to endure lectures that could turn the stomach, and never walk into the darkroom and flip on the lights... unless you had recently ordered your headstone!

Various other rules screamed across the barriers between teachers and their students: Don't bring in computer disks from home; no games on these computers; no coats in the classroom—yes, I do know it is only 58 degrees! You may go to the washroom only once during this semester from my class, so make sure you need to go! But the all-time favorite remains posted in v110: Your mother doesn't work here—you will have to pick up after yourself!

Do your best and have fun

School was more fun when students tried their best. Factors contributing to this opinion included junior Scott Whelan's idea: "Cooperative learning and the option to retest make my school day more fun and rewarding."

Other students found the joys of school to be in the good grades they received. "When I get a good test score or report card, I put it right on the door of the refrigerator. I want everyone to know when I've done a good job," said Brandi Cueller, 11.

If some did not make a big deal about the good job they did, their grades were overlooked. Paul Vaughters, 10, said, "My best efforts are usually taken for granted."

Students compared different standards of what their best should be. Ryan Blastick, 12, said, "My personal best does not necessarily mean getting an A." This standard was probably determined by the type of course and the teacher in charge.

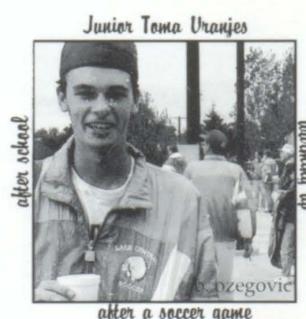

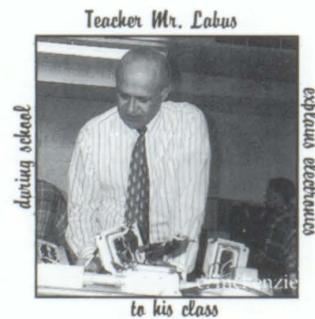

Rob Wolfman, 11, said, "When I absolutely try my hardest, I should get an A because that is the level of work I am capable of."

Doing your best often took a large amount of time and effort. "Doing good is often worth any time and effort because it pays off," said senior Liz Ault.

Teachers viewed their best students in a special light. Ryan Sekula, 11, said, "I feel teachers treat me well when they know that I try to achieve a lot in their class."

Students experienced enjoyment from the congratulations they received. Michelle Hussey, 9, said, "Teachers offer congratulations sometimes when I do good. Most of the time, though, my friends do not notice unless I tell them what a hard time I had with the assignment."

A number of students found that school was more fun when they did their best, even if it took more time and effort than just going to school because they had to.

Possible addiction to honors?

Well all heard the same familiar phrase as report cards came out again—"Well, I got a B but it's really an A because it's honors." We were all so dependent on points that we didn't realize they might not mean anything to us after we graduated.

To the majority of the LC population, the points were most valuable for the effect they had on grade-point averages. They changed a regular 4-point scale to five points. Don't be mistaken though—we all knew that the points weren't just given away; they did require extra work.

To get the points in honors geometry a student had to do the regular work plus extra work. A few students felt that was wrong because they had busy schedules and didn't have time to do all their regular homework and extra work for points.

Many classes that offered the points weren't that different from the regular classes—they were just faster paced. And with that faster pace came a lot of pressure. Melissa Lefko, 10, said, "Since there is a lot of extra work and they do go faster, there is some extra pressure—but I guess that's what honors is."

Many classes were taken just to receive that all important extra point. Kacey Hammel, 12, said, "I'd have taken other classes, but I want the point and the fact that some electives aren't honors doesn't draw you to them."

However, some teachers had an entirely different viewpoint on the honors system. Mr. Wayne Svetanoff said, "Kids should take the higher level honors courses because they are interested in and challenged by the material—not just to receive points."

So the question remained as to why so many people took the pressure and hard work of an honors course in a topic that might not even have interested them. Maybe the feelings of those involved in an honors class could be concluded by "It's all for the point."

I can't remember my name!

Memory was something we often took for granted, but you remembered only 80 percent of what you heard five minutes later and less than 50 percent the next day. Gerson Vaca, 9, said, "I forget what I'm going to say a couple times a day." Imagine, if you couldn't remember what you were going to say, how could you be expected to remember what six teachers had to say?

Shannon Fogarty, 10, said, "It's hard to remember things going from teacher to teacher."

Steve Miller, 11, agreed. He said, "Each teacher has his own set of rules, and it never fails, they always schedule tests on the same day. It's hard enough trying to remember things for one test, let alone several."

Students found many things difficult to remember. Fogarty said, "I often forget where I parked my car." Other objects were often misplaced, like wallets and keys.

Other items needed to be remembered, but names, phone numbers and homework assignments were problems. Joe Myers, 9, said, "People had different ways of keeping themselves organized. Megan Barry, 9, said, "The way I remember things of importance is just simply writing them on my hand."

Kelly Henry, 12, said, "There are lots of things going on in my life. I have to leave myself little notes to be more organized."

While we were guilty of forgetting many things, some of us just pretended to forget. Michelle Doran, 11, said, "I try hard to forget about doing my chores, but it never works." Homework assignments naturally ranked at the top of that list.

No free public education

ou weighed your options: should you choose a public education or a private education? Of course, cost was the main issue. By attending the local public school, there were many benefits: no outstanding tuition fees and no expensive plaid uniforms. According to many, public schools offered several expenses: lunches, pictures, parking permits, event tickets, and so on. "Free" public education came with a high price tag, sometimes too pricey for low-income families to afford.

Even though LC tuition was quite pricey, it was a relief for some. Shannon Carroll, 12, spent $230 on books when she attended Andrean but only $106 at LC. "Even though book rental here was less expensive, public education was no where near free. Here you have to pay for every little thing, including a change in your schedule and even a parking permit!" Carroll said.

Kylie Klenoski, 10, agreed. "My book rental wasn't all that much, but since I am involved in sports, there are many more things I have to pay for," she said.

Many believed that all individuals should be charged the same tuition fee. Moses Koktsidis, 12, said, "My book rental costs $40 more than some of my friends just because I chose different electives. It's ridiculous that I should have to pay that much more just because I'm not interested in the course that cost less, like varsity choir, ceramics, or things of that sort."

Each class offered a strong foundation with the experience and knowledge needed for the future. The unique benefits were worth the time and money put into them, and costs were judged a trivial matter in comparison.

They don't get any respect

Always one special teacher made an impact on your life. One teacher whose exceptional teaching methods encouraged you to take an interest in a certain area. Through humor or motivation, that one teacher taught us that learning could be fun. We may have even learned how to get something more out of life.

Julie Madden, 11, admired English teacher, Ms. Penny Tokoly, because, "The manner in which she explains things is very intuitive and enlightening. We acted out scenes from The Crucible, which helped me remember certain parts for the test."

Other teachers used clever ways of teaching certain things. Senior Jason Pore commented on Ms. Pam Miller's teaching ability by saying, "She sings tunes. Little jingles that help us to remember things." But her jingles were not necessarily all fun and games Pore said, "She's interesting enough that she gets her point across."

Maybe your freshman English teacher held a special day when students dressed up like Shakespearean characters. or your chemistry teacher played the "mole song" for you. Maybe your favorite teachers were the ones that did nothing more than tell a few funny jokes to brighten your day, but these were the things we would remember. Not because of subject matter, but because of the teacher and the method. Some of these outstanding teachers received the recognition they deserved, but the majority remained unrecognized but appreciated.

Miss a day, catch up two

Although LC permitted students to miss six days before losing credit, missing just one day often made students feel they had been gone for weeks. When returning to school, students had to make up the day's work that was missed plus the current day's work. To further complicate matters, teachers often left "busy work" to keep students occupied.

Many did not agree with this policy of limiting days of absence, while others believed it was effective. Sophomore Melissa Wychocki thought the policy was restrictive. she said, "It cuts out the slackers—the ones who ditch school for no reason."

Coming back to school after being gone for one or more days made the students often feel overwhelmed. Some teachers wanted the students to make up the work within a few days along with that's day's work. Students felt they were bombarded with homework for days. A few students said that the work was too much at first, but once you got back in the flow of things, everything turned out all right.

Nicky Rodeck, 10, said, "They give us a lot of work to keep us busy which teachers would not give us on our own because they know it's stupid!"

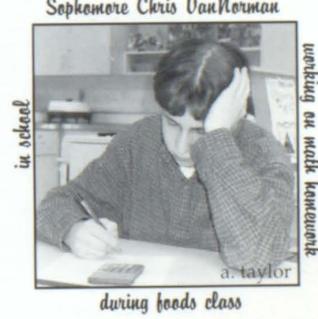

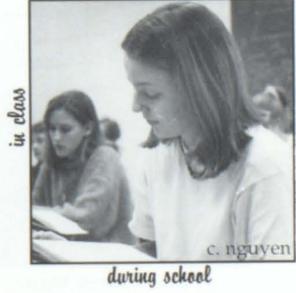

Very few teachers graded and returned the busy work that they left when they were gone. No matter if a student was absent or the teacher was absent, the student was always the one who ended up doing all the work and the students were the ones who lost out on learning.

When too much is not enough

Parental involvement was a substantial part of the average teen's life. With grades coming out every 4 1/2 weeks and all the extra-curricular activities teens participated in, parents were involved in a lot of our affairs. Good or bad, we knew the school wouldn't be the same without the PTA, the band boosters, or the moms who bought the coupon books from the Athletic Letter Winners.

"It's good for parents to support their kids. Parents should push good grades and do whatever they can to make school easier for us," said Cristin Cargal, 12.

Most LC students did not mind this much. Yet the students that hated it had as many strong points as the ones who preferred their parents in their lives. Most parents were just out for our benefit, and students admitted this. Donna Weeks, 9, felt differently. "If my parents were to get too involved, it would probably turn into disaster. With my bad grades I would probably get grounded for life if they saw them."

Even though kids viewed parental involvement differently, there was one thing they had in common. They all hated punishments such as the infamous grounding or the terrible confiscation of their belongings. Joel Ryan, 11, said about the punishment at his house, "They spank me!"

But Brandon Hubbard, 12, said, "I wouldn't be able to use the car. My social life would be ruined!"

This battle for control continued throughout the year. That was one part of a teen's life that did not go away with time; like it or not our parents were always there for us.

School is no piece of cake!

Learning can be a most enlightening experience, motivating many to enter different career fields, but for some, learning certain subjects caused massive problems.

Some subjects sounded weird or unreal, and those were the ones that caused the most problems for LC students. "Geometry proofs are the hardest things I had to learn," said junior Shawn Gonion. Concerning why proofs were so hard to learn, Gonion replied, "It's really hard and the class is boring, but I need to get more tutoring for it."

Foreign language also caused hardships for some. Kara King, 9, said, "Verbs in Spanish II are really hard." But King knew why she had such a hard time in Spanish II; she said, "I think I should study it more." That proved the key answer from many students who found their grades slipping.

For honors English students, the summer reading requirements were the hardest thing to learn. "Learning the consequences of not doing the summer reading was the hardest to learn," said Andrew Rathbun, 9.

Science offered further headaches. Freshman Stacey Pazera said, "Learning scientific formulas is very hard for me, and I don't like them, but since I want to be a doctor, I should learn them."

Not every learning experience dealt with academics. Sophomore Derek Smith said, "I had to learn how hard it is to get my locker open."

The size of LC caused a learning experience for more than one student. "It's hard to get from one place to another," said Bev Bane, 9.

It's not all academic

Ask any LC student the most important thing he learned all year, and he was sure to tell you something that was not strictly academic. The fact was that some of the most important things we learned in high school were not academic at all.

In high school we all had a common purpose to learn, but sometimes we had to take it one step further and look at what we were learning. "Something that I have learned this year," said Beth Langton, 9, "is that you should never get in a fight with a friend over a guy."

Melanie Fogarty, 9, gave more advice about guys.

She said, "Boyfriends come and go, but friends last forever."

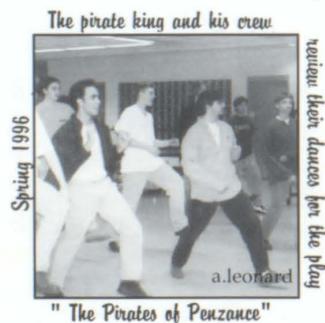

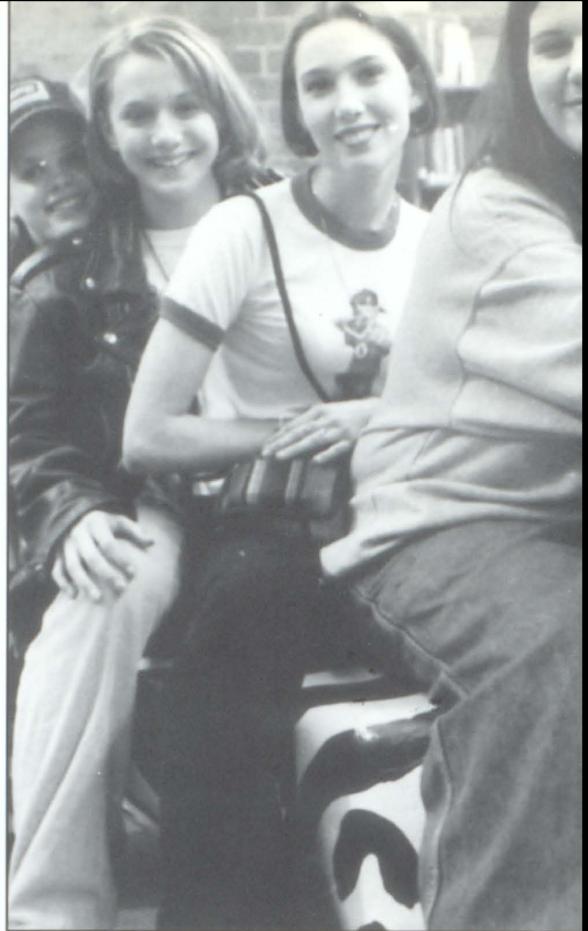

In high school we learned not only in the classroom but outside the classroom as well. Bobby Sullivan, 9, said, "Don't do things just to make other people happy. Do it to please yourself."

Considering the amount of time and effort students put into studying and trying to make the grades, they ended up spending just as much time learning things that had nothing to do with school. In fact, some of us didn't even realize that every day we learned at least one lesson that morally affected our lives. "Something I learned this year is that friends really do count," said Nikki Ladd, 9.

Some things we learned lacked the importance of others. Billy Miller, 9, said, "I learned to never eat the school's food." We learned new things every day, some of which we will remember always but some of which we won't remember the next day.

Jenny Ryan, 9, said, "The most important thing I learned was being able to keep peace between all my friends." For many the drudgery of hard work and study was replaced by learning the true meaning of morals, friendship and common sense, ideals that were far from trivial.

Embarrassing moments live on

ust the simplest mistake on a test or quiz, or just a simple slip of the tongue, and you could expect to turn red every time you would hear about it for the rest of your life. No matter how much time elapsed, just when you felt safe, along came someone who was willing to remind you of the time when...

Kevin Surdyk, 12, said, "In the middle of class, I was thinking about something instead of paying attention, and I stood up and said, 'Da, what the —!'"

Another senior, Wanda Baca, said, "During class I was playing with a squirt gun. I just kept squirting and squirting until the teacher took the squirt gun away and sat me in a corner facing the wall!"

Surdyk also said that during a scan-tron test he accidentally flipped the form over and did the last 50 questions, forgetting all about the first 50. When students found themselves in a jam on a scan-tron test, they filled in the infamous ABACADABA. Baca said, "On a scan-tron test I filled in ABCD because I didn't know the answers." Some were daring enough to attempt cheating, regardless of the loss of credit if they were caught.

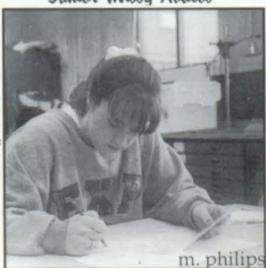

Students weren't the only ones embarrassing themselves during class. Ms. Penny Tokoly remarked that she accidentally left the answers on the board when her students were taking a quiz. And one time a teacher even skipped around the room because he was so happy his student answered correctly.

Though embarrassing, these memories will be repeated to friends and future family members. Making mistakes and embarrassing one's self was just a part of life, and the best part came when you were allowed to share those embarrassing moments.

Sports

*A*lthough LC wrestling has never really been a recognized sport, junior Vince Sessa made the headlines this year with his state appearance.

In pursuit of a victory

*A*h! The thrill of victory. At practices or even when they had a few moments to themselves, athletes pondered the thought of winning the gold, all of the marbles, the big one—the state championship. Whether it was to follow in a teammates' footsteps or to achieve the accomplishment themselves, athletes strived for the top in their sport.

*B*oys' track members pursued some of the oldest records still intact at LC. Ken Kidd set the school record for the fastest speed in 110 hurdles (14.6 seconds) in 1977. Kevin Fox, Tim Turpin, Tim Senzig, and Joe Pavell hold the record for the 880 relay set in 1971. The dreams of high school athletes were neverending. There was nothing more important to any teenager than to be in the limelight as the best in their particular sport. Athletes went to great extents to be the best that they could be. It didn't help that they had inspiration from former teammates to help them along. Wrestlers attempted to follow in the footsteps of James Torres ('95) who won the state championship his senior year. Other athletes strived to break their own personal records. Juniors Sara Sheridan, Andrea Powell, Brooke Engle and Jen Steinkraus set the record for the mile relay in 1994. All returned to pursue the record and to establish new ones.

Athletes went to great extremes to be the best they could be. Although some were not able to participate as much as others and were left out of the limelight, they realized that at any given time they could be called upon to perform. They realized that someday, their time would come.

Sophomore Stepanie Barth diligently studies for a big test the day of a track meet. It was very important for student athletes to maintain high grades.

Sophomore Stepanie Barth and Candy Frazier have a quick snack before starting their homework at a track meet.

Balancing school and sports

Day after day student athletes faced many difficult choices and decisions. The responsibility and hard work that high school athletes had to exert to balance both athletics and academics continually caused stress, yet allowed them to become more disciplined individuals.

For some students, going to school for six and a half hours each day was enough to endure without having a 2-hour practice to look forward to directly after school. Others felt that the choice of belonging to a sport was up to the person; if that individual chose to be in a sport, s/he had to take the necessary responsibilities.

Homework was one major obstacle that challenged athletes. By the time the school day was finished and the practice or game concluded, athletes went home to study for tests or finish various assignments. Junior Katie Perschon, a member of the girls' swimming and tennis teams, said, "Being in a sport takes a lot of effort because of the full schedule. Even though I found it difficult at times to keep up with school and other activities, I eventually managed to get everything I wanted done during the two seasons."

In order to participate, student athletes had to receive good grades—all the more of why they had to be careful with their time management. But somehow, a vast majority of LC students fulfilled their high expectations. After all, many LC athletic teams contained above average students who were willing to put the time in to accomplish the best. A multitude of students took on the sometimes tough challenge of maintaining athletics and academics. These individuals had to be prepared to handle the pressures associated with balancing school and other activities, and many often succeeded.

he varsity football team started its season with an exciting trip to the RCA Dome to battle the Portage Indians. Although LC lost, it was a very close and nerve-wrenching contest. Many people speculated that this early loss was a preview of what was to come for the rest of the season's matches.

Leading the offensive attack were quarterbacks Dann Ellenwood, 12, and Bob Pesavento, 11. Behind them in the backfield were senior running backs, Jason Lindemann and Tim Jocic. Probably the most famous of the offense was the offensive linemen composed of seniors, Jeff Thiel, Nick Ballard, Scott Berger, Greg Wasiak and Mike Biegelbeck.

Given the job of halting the enemy, the LC defense did a superb job of completing their assignment. Leading the defense were seniors Aaron Vela, Kirk Peifer, Rudy Lomberger, and the Blastick brothers, Ryan and Tom.

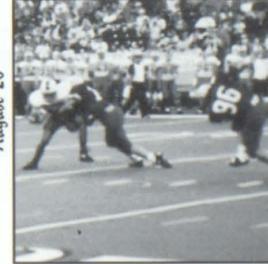

The Indians proved everybody wrong by turning the season around and making it a successful season.

ready, set, like!

Both jv and freshman football claimed positive years, beginning with the season-opening O'Rama games played at Munster. Jv tied Highland but lost to Munster. The freshman team saw two good starting quarters of play, with the A team tieing Munster and the B team tieing Highland.

Regular jv and freshman A team seasons suffered losses to Portage 34-0 and 28-12; the freshman B team defeated Portage 16-8.

After jv's tough second loss to Munster in the closing seconds of that game, a swift turn-around enjoyed three straight wins, as Andrean, Highland and East Chicago fell to the Indians. However, the season dimmed as jv ended with a loss to a talented Lake Forest team.

Quarterback Mike Gelon, 10, led the jv team. The experienced offensive line consisting of juniors Herb Hilbrich, Chris White and Dan Robertson dominated the line. Also helping the team were running backs Pat Evans, 11, and Ed Redford, 10, who also saw some varsity time.

Both freshman squads enjoyed strong seasons despite the A's early loss, stepping up to a 7-game winning streak. A-team defense bragged of holding the other team offenses to 5.4 points per game. The offense also offered an explosive attack; behind quarterback Steve Renzino, the offense scored an average of 29 points per game.

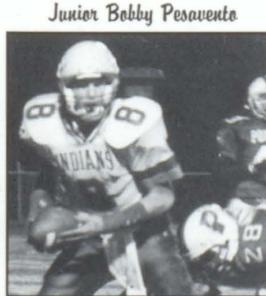

Players were pleased but saw room for improvement. "We did all right. We could have done better. Our offense had a decent year," said Gelon.

Freshmen experience remained aimed at a future with varsity or jv. "We had a winning team this season. We scored a lot of points," said Renzino.

It would have been great to go farther than we did, but I'll never forget the memorable moments we had during the regular season."

Girls' varsity volleyball

in a state of rebuilding...

Girls' basketball was not the only sport to suffer from losing quality players like Kristina Divjak, Jessica Mitchuson and Leslie Rossa to graduation. After returning only two starting players from last year, the girls' varsity volleyball team experienced a state of rebuilding, losing sectionals for the first time in several years.

Despite the loss at sectionals, the team finished with a respectable 26-10 record for the season. Adjusting to the new coach, Rick Ashmore, also may have contributed to a slow start for the team, but LC eventually came together to pull out some tough victories. One major highlight of the season was winning the Lowell Tourney, when the team defeated several quality opponents by demonstrating solid teamwork and effort.

While LC looks forward to returning several key players for the team next year, it will also be losing two quality players in the process. LC's only seniors, Sarah VanGorp and Erica Kaufman, provided leadership and experience to lead the way for the relatively young team throughout the entire season and will definitely be missed.

However, the tremendous talent and effort contributed so very often by the two during the regular season was not enough to pull out a victory when it mattered most—at sectionals. Despite winning easily against the first two opponents in sectional play, Griffith and Highland, the Munster Mustangs proved the dominant team in the sectional final. Even though LC gave an exceptional showing, the powerful offensive attack of the Mustangs was too much to handle.

Obviously the team, especially the seniors, were disappointed. But the improvement shown from the beginning of the season to the end was something not to be overlooked. Kaufman said, "Of course, we were disappointed in the way our season ended. We really wanted to go farther than sectionals, and to lose to Munster, that was hard to swallow. But, on the positive side, we really improved."

And even though Kaufman and VanGorp lost their chance to win another sectional during their time at LC, they still can be proud of being a part of the team that won the 1994 regional, the first LC ever achieved.

Jv/frosh volleyball

improving with each step...

*W*ith the number of games won not being as high as was expected, the girls' junior varsity volleyball team experienced a season of rebuilding. After the previous jv volleyball coach, Ms. Ann Downey, opted to coach the freshman team this year, the arrival of a new coach proved to be somewhat of a difficult adjustment.

Despite a disappointing season, the relatively young team had many valuable players who will be seen playing on the varsity level in the years to come. Freshman Terri Gettes, Jill Huetten and Brooke Platt all contributed major roles to the team during their first season at LC.

Juniors Jen Platt and Julie Wilkins also provided the leadership that helped lead to some important victories. Even though the season was discouraging for many, there was not one game where the players gave up the fight.

Winning, however, was not the only thing the team was pursuing. Having fun and learning, as in any other sport, served as primary goals that were often times achieved for the team. Sophomore Kylie Klenowski, who transferred from Andrean, said, "Being a part of the team this year was a very fun experience. I learned a lot to improve my game."

Rivals between teams

Everyone has had a rival at some time. Rivals started with toddlers fighting over toys and continued with young teens fighting over significant others. Of all of these diminutive differences, high school rivals were the thing.

From Centralettes to soccer, each sports team experienced rivals. Some of these rivals were schools far away, and others were schools we knew well. In either case, the fight lasted until one team went down. "The boys' basketball rival was Andrean," said Chris Hill, 11, "I knew a lot of their players, and if we didn't beat them I'd never hear the end of it."

Most of the girls' soccer players agreed that their rival was Merrillville. "They just walked onto our field with an attitude that they couldn't be beat so we had to beat them," said Kim Muenzer, 11.

Even the not-so-sporty activities had their rivals. "We just had to beat Bedford North Lawrence at every major competition we had. We competed with them for first at dance state," said Centralette Jill Ehrenzeller, 11.

The cheerleaders' goals were to beat Munster and Crown Point. "Their goal is always beat LC at games or cheer competition," said Kristen Szmoniak, 11.

"A lot of the time it was a fight over who was louder, had the most school spirit, and the best mounts," said Chris Graham, 11.

The varsity football team made it to sectionals this past season. Their tough struggle was not enough to defeat Portage. "Our rival was definitely Portage. I hated most of their players," said George Benetich, 11.

Students faced competitions all through the year creating new rivals after each one. Whether it was hated or friendly acquaintances on the opposing side, most of the time that team became our rival. These pointless differences make the crowd cheer louder, the team play harder, and the game a lot more intense.

Varsity girls' golf

the start of a dynasty...

lacing seventh at regional competition sounds more impressive if the facts are known; varsity girls' golf was a mere six strokes away from the state tournament with their seventh-place showing at regionals. Two other facts add to the impressiveness of seventh place: Girls' golf had not seen regional competition for the four prior years, and this varsity team claimed unbelievable youth, with the two oldest people only juniors.

During regular season, the girls broke three records. During their first appearance at the Rensselaer Tournament they placed their best finish ever. Another record was broken for a school home record, when the team shot a 196 against Munster.

Later at the LaPorte Invite, they tied their best finish ever. By the time the regular season rolled to a stop, they could claim an impressive 11-2 dual meet record.

Post season fared equally well, with the girls breaking yet another record in sectional play by finishing second with a 393. Regional's seventh place ended with a score of 417.

Girls' x-country

outlasting the opposition...

The sport of long-distance running was one of the toughest and most grueling in LC athletics. The job of molding the girls' cross-country team into running machines was given to Coach Don Bugaski.

The girls practiced every day after school by running almost three miles. Running that far daily required the utmost dedication to the school and to the themselves. The girls were in top condition for the many meets that they had to compete in over the season.

The girls enjoyed running also. "I like to run cross-country because it is one of the best ways to get into shape. I also like to compete in other running sports for my school," said Lisa Pawlik, 11.

Girls' cross-country proved one of the top teams in the area lately, maintaining the Sectional championship five years in a row.

Girls' swimming opened a season of high expectations Aug. 22 against the number-two-ranked Valpo Vikings, falling to them in a hard fought meet. Junior Chrissy Bonnin reflected the team's enthusiasm. "Last year we graduated most of our team, but we have a lot of good freshmen, and we've been working hard in the preseason," she said.

One word, commitment, described this team. Senior Carrie Monzin talked about the 5 a.m. practices: "Freezing water, not yet awake, grouchy people. It was very hard on days when many of us were sick, but we were still there in the pool after school by 2:30. Our days lasted from 5:30 a.m. until 5:30 p.m."

Team spirit was the constant motivator, with enthusiasm and camaraderie driving the team. Monzin said, "I know it sounds weird but a couple of us would eat Crispix or Cocoa Pebbles before practice and by the time we got in the water we were so hyper that we could not help but be enthusiastic."

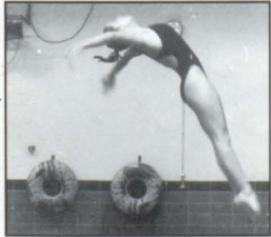

Behind the enthusiasm lurked the real driving force, Coach Jim Tonkovich. Monzin said, "I feel that we owe our success to Jim Tonkovich. He helped us believe in ourselves, and he also proved to us that we could do it no matter how hard things became."

Their season ended at state level with a thirty-third placement overall. A bitter ending, yet certain individuals excelled. Junior Stacy Latham said, "I thought that we had the potential to do a lot better than this at state, but Elaine Hylek, 11, did an excellent individual job."

Hylek placed seventeenth in the 200 IM and 100 meter breaststroke race.

Highlights of the season included senior Janel Benda's scholarship to Miami. Benda was state runner-up in diving. The team won't soon forget redeeming the early loss to Munster and admitted learning from the tough Carmel opponent.

hile the majority of people hovered near an air conditioner and refused even to head for the beaches, the region's sweltering summer temperatures didn't phase a determined cross-country team. Planning their practice times around the most sensible times of day, cross-country runners maintained their average of 50 miles per week. Their summer of hard work paid off in big dividends throughout their fall season.

Boys' cross accomplished many of their seasonal goals, attaining the name of one of the best teams in the area. "On the whole, we had a very successful season. Our guys really had to come together as a team to get the job done," said cross-country coach, Mr. Rudy Skorupa.

Runners showed satisfaction with their total accomplishment. "We had the best season in a long time," said Kevin Bauer, 11. The team came together for the all-important sectional and regional championship wins.

Placing an over-all tenth at state competitive level, which was nothing to be ashamed of, left the team already planning for their possible future successes. Coach Skorupa, likewise, could not resist the temptation: "The bulk of our team is coming back next year, and we are looking forward to having another successful year and hopefully placing higher at the state meet."

setting the standard...

fter going eight years without a sectional win, members of the boys' tennis team knew that their time had finally come to experience the thrill of a sectional victory. LC pulled out an exceptional 4-1 win against Highland in the sectional finals to earn that positive feeling and also show the improvement made throughout the past years.

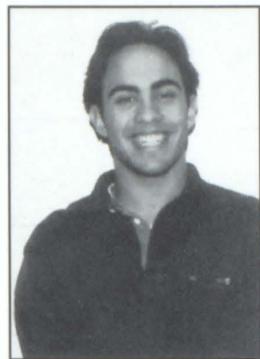

Winning in number one doubles and earning LC a much-needed victory was sophomore sensation David Todorovich, with a score of 6-3, 6-4. Providing experience at the number two doubles spot, Brian Sherwinski, 12, defeated his opponent with an impressive 2-6, 6-2, 6-3 score. Also winning easily at the number three singles position was Joe Skowronski, 10, by a score of 6-3, 6-4.

Seniors Brett Furuness and Bob Stevenson combined their talent to survive in number two doubles, defeating their opponent 4-6, 6-1, 7-6 (7-0). Juniors Matt Gunningham and Kris Madayag exhibited great effort but failed in their attempt to win against the opposition. However, the other qualifiers for LC advanced to the Munster Regional.

Despite a tremendous showing at regionals, the group failed to achieve a win. However, the players were just happy to have made their mark by winning sectionals and advancing to regionals. Coach Ralph Holden was also happy with the team's performance throughout the season and felt it consistently played competitive tennis.

Since the varsity team was comprised mostly of seniors, the win added one final positive memory of their time at LC. Sherwinski said, "We've had the best year in a long time. Being on losing teams since my freshman year, winning sectionals made it all pay off in the end and especially because it was the first time in eight years. Our goal at the beginning of the year was .500 or better, and we accomplished that with a final record of 9-9."

Boys' varsity soccer

While many people attended the usual football, basketball and baseball games, others have now taken notice of another sport. Some have become avid followers of soccer. Throughout the past decade, the game of soccer has become one of the most popular sports nationally as well as internationally. A very popular sport throughout European and Latin American countries, soccer has brought great interest into town, traveling, high school and college teams. When it comes down to soccer in the area, LC is ranked among the best.

And there was no doubt about that. By the end of their 1995 season, the team had achieved outstanding record of 10-5-3. With players such as Artis Shepard, 10, the team scared their opponents to pieces. With his speed and outstanding soccer talent, he helped lead the team to many victories, along with senior MVP Kris Anderson.

Although its regular season record did not display outstanding success, the team held together at tournament time and won the Bishop Noll Sectional.

Jv boys' soccer

demanding respect...

V

ivid falling swirls of orange, yellow and red leaves--along with falling temperatures--signalled more than fall as boys' soccer season fell into action.

Jv boys achieved more than usual for a single season. Besides the celebrated wins and devastating losses, opponents demanded respect, allowing a season of 13 wins, 2 losses, and one tie.

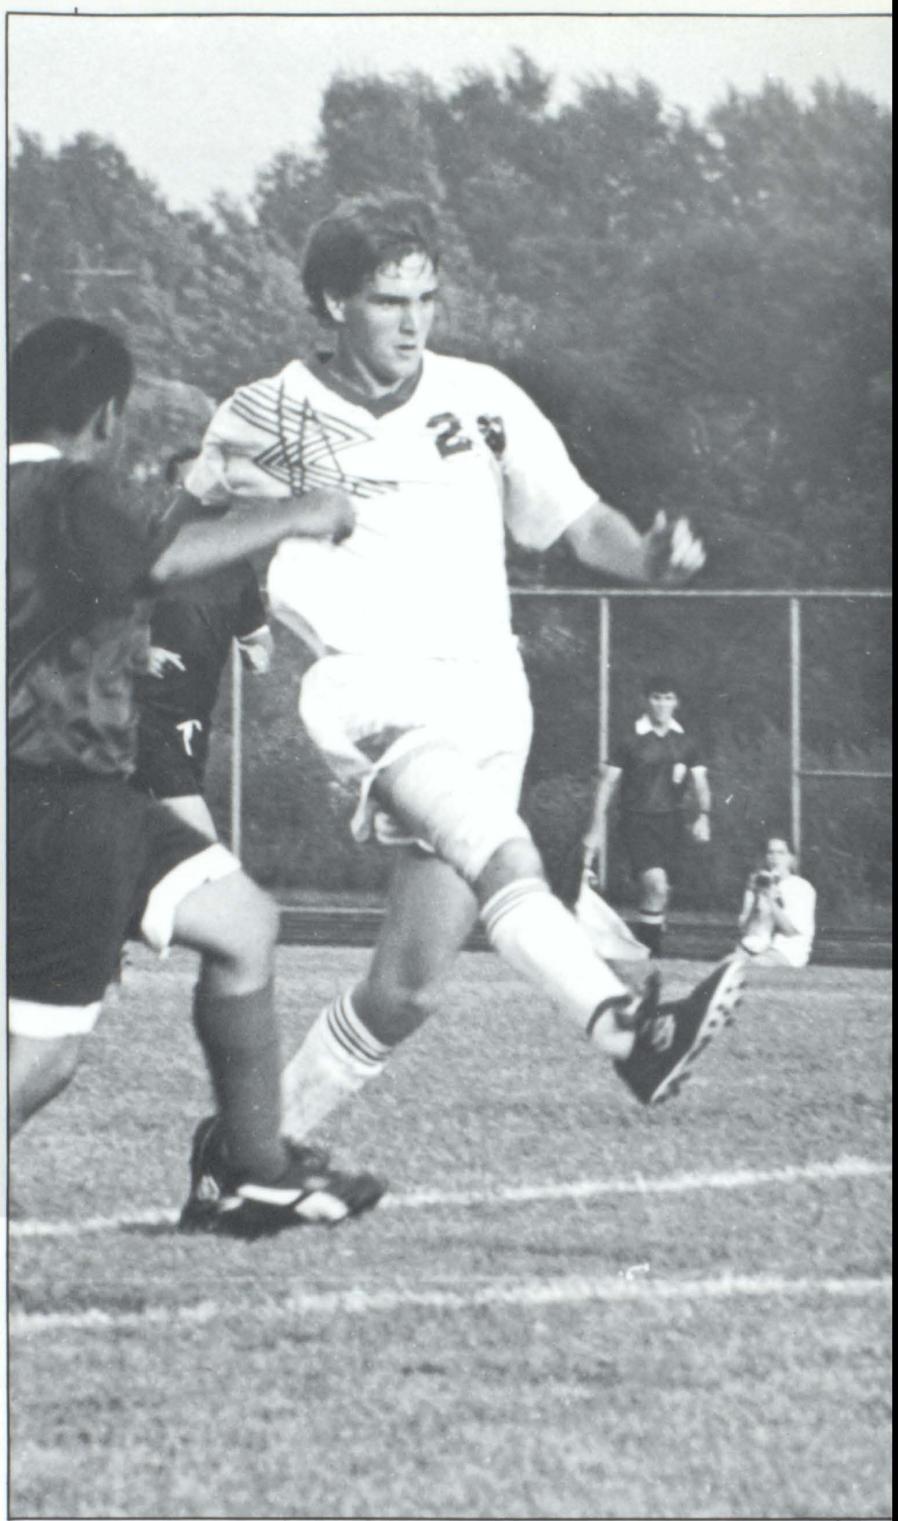

The jv season can brag about scoring 47 goals and allowing only 7 to sneak past the ever-alert defense. Through cooperation and determination, jv boys scored 2.9 goals per game.

Demanding after-school practices were musts for drills to be refined throughout the arduous season. Despite the hard work the players faced, the fun and enjoyment of the game managed to shine through. Jv boys' soccer was coached by Mr. Lee Paris.

Girls' soccer

In 1994 LC was graced with yet another sport which displayed great success and commendation throughout the state. The sport was girls' soccer. With an outstanding record last season and a trip to the sectional and regional, the team was a new addition to LC's sports organization. And in only their second season, the girls were at it again with an undefeated season record and another trip to the sectional and regional.

The team was at full capacity most of the season with some of the best talent in the area. But after the stunning loss of Kelly Komara to a knee injury, the Lady Indians were without one of their best players. This injury may have put her out for the rest of the season, but the Indians continued their great success without her.

No matter what the situation, the girls were ready at all times to put out their 100 percent effort. The hard work and dedication from the team throughout the season was the reason for this great success.

starting a new kick...

Perhaps the happiest occasion for jv girls' soccer happened when they defeated Hobart 10-0. Portage provided the toughest competition, with that game ending in a 1-1 tie. Competition was hard to come by because of strong defense.

If getting along as a group was important to the game, this group proved they could come together as a team. Having fun was no small part.

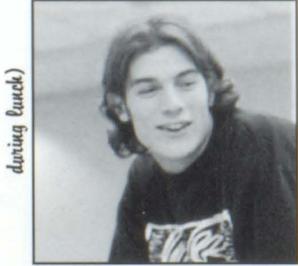

Team leaders included junior Kate Lentz, junior Meredith Houk and sophomore Amy Moore. Freshman Julie Lain and Becky Shearer were also noted as strong players. Players attributed part of their success to coach Mary Beth Opat. Varsity players liked Opat's help as well, stating that she quickly became a "mom" as well as a coach.

Athletic Trainers

Athletic trainers gave up many hours of their free time to help accommodate the needs of LC athletes. The student trainers gave up many hours during the summer to ice down, tape up, and fix all the needs of the athletes.

In her first year at LC, former Lafayette Jefferson athletic trainer, Ms. Alicia Dobbles took over as Head Trainer at LC. Dobbles took over as head trainer when former trainer, Mr. Dave Sledden went to move onto chiropractic medicine. "The year was challenging because I came from a school with bigger facilities and more equipment," said Dobbles.

The student trainers begin their jobs right after school and do not finish until around 6 p.m. The trainers were also at all the games getting there early to prepare the players for the games and long afterwards to fix their wounds. "Working with the teams, helping them out and learning about injuries," interested Denise Bolanowski.

Being a student trainer offers opportunities in the fields of medicine and physical therapy. Student trainers Jen Reiter, 10, and Melissa Joseforsky, 11, both expressed interest in going on in physical therapy after high school. "I have become interested in sports medicine and I want to go into physical therapy after high school," said Reiter.

Although the trainers had to sit through many long hours of practice, they still had a good time. "We went through at least twenty cases of tape throughout the football season," said Dobbles. "Training was a lot of fun. It was really cool being with the football team and helping out. I had a great time and I have great memories," said Bolanowski.

W making a statement...

When the varsity hockey team began practicing in early November, many had hopes for improvement on the previous year's record. The intentions concerned better play in both Indiana and Illinois leagues. Several victories over similar-caliber Indiana teams helped the skating Indians achieve just under a 500 winning percentage. Defenseman Marc Lazzaro, 12, said, "The Indians were a united team when they were all present and maintaining low-penalty minutes."

The long 5-month playing season caused players to burn out; many complained that mid-season particularly tested their endurance. Throughout the tough schedules, the Indians performed much better than their underdog rating of eight of eight indicated.

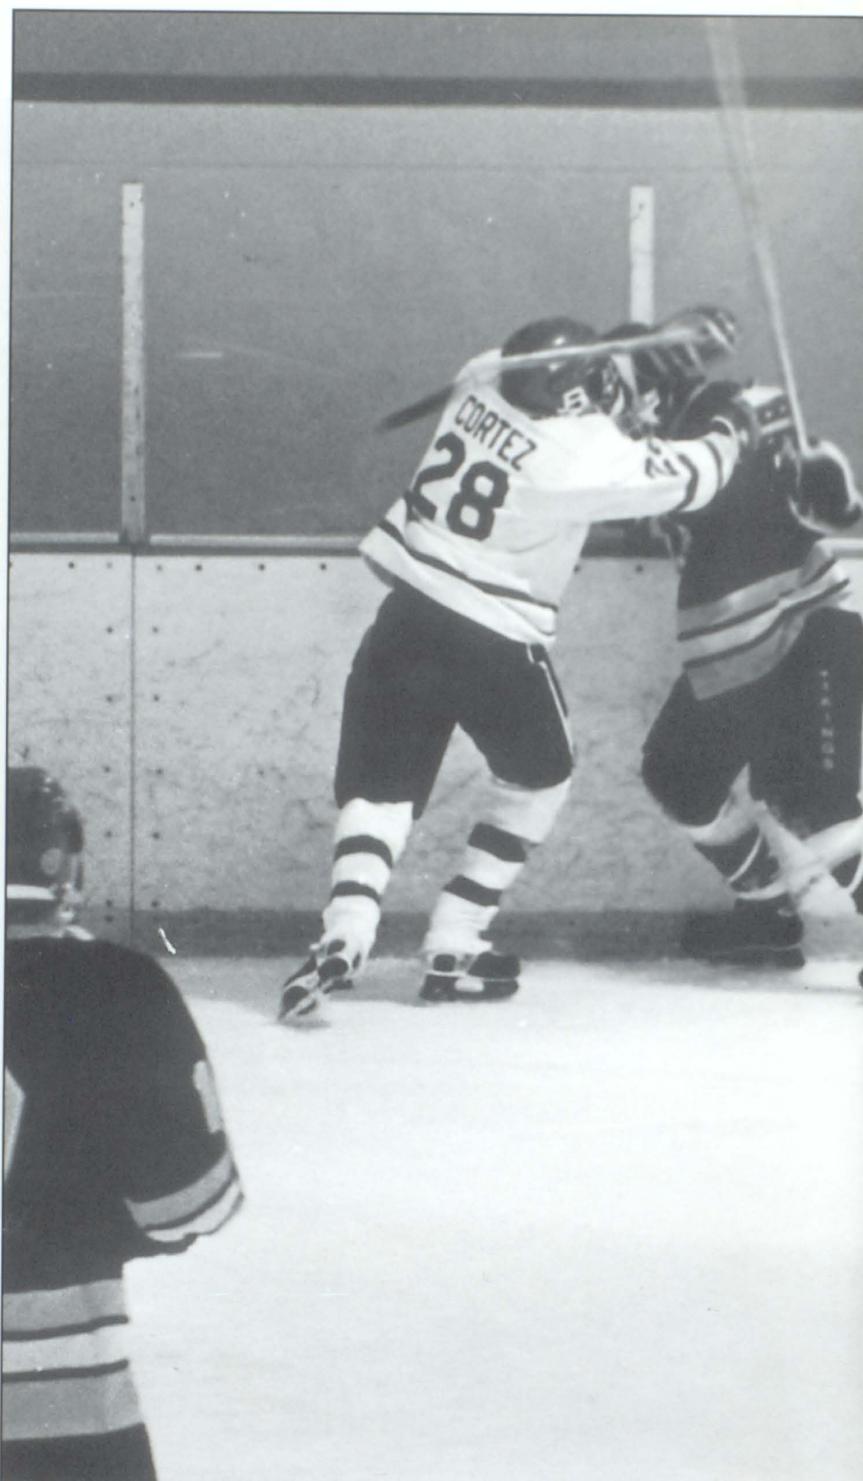

A fifth-place finish in the Single A division of the state tournament saw a disappointing first-match loss to Fort Wayne Schnider. The Indians were then sent to a lower bracket to finish the competition, beating Caramel B 5-3 and Penn by a close 5-4. Captain Ron Walker, 11, said, "Winning the last game of the tournament in the last two minutes was a perfect cap to the season."

Captains James Twardy and Ron Walker and offensive threat, Jeff Kooper, all earned MVP. Twardy was the leading scorer for the team's offensive attack.

When the jv hockey team took the ice for the first time, they appeared young and immature, but the mostly freshmen team played well throughout the season despite their inexperience. Plagued by penalties and grade disqualifications, the team underwent hardships and still finished above a 500 winning percentage at 8-7-2. A strong player, Jon Walker, 10, said, "The season began very slow and tiresome, but with maturity and desire the team earned themselves recognition."

As the season progressed, the team adjusted to its loss of players being promoted to varsity level. Aaron Amptmeyer, 9, said, "The team finally came together after becoming more acquainted with the new coaches and a consistent line-up." Continuing to show improvement, they placed fourth in the slapshot tournament at Orland Park. That tournament offered excitement, though they lost a tough battle with only 39 seconds left. Jason Gargas, 9, and Matt Kras, 9, both felt that the team became very good and stable because each player gave his 100 percent.

At season's end the team chose Adam Brown, 10, as their inspirational player of the year for his team leadership. Consisting of many freshmen, the team established a unified strength with their desire and heart. Matt Gorenz, 10, and Grant Schaap, 10, enjoyed the season but felt that they had begun to slip away in March.

aking giant strides for a team bragging of only two seniors, wrestlers battled their way through sectionals only to see their season ended in the second round at regional competition.

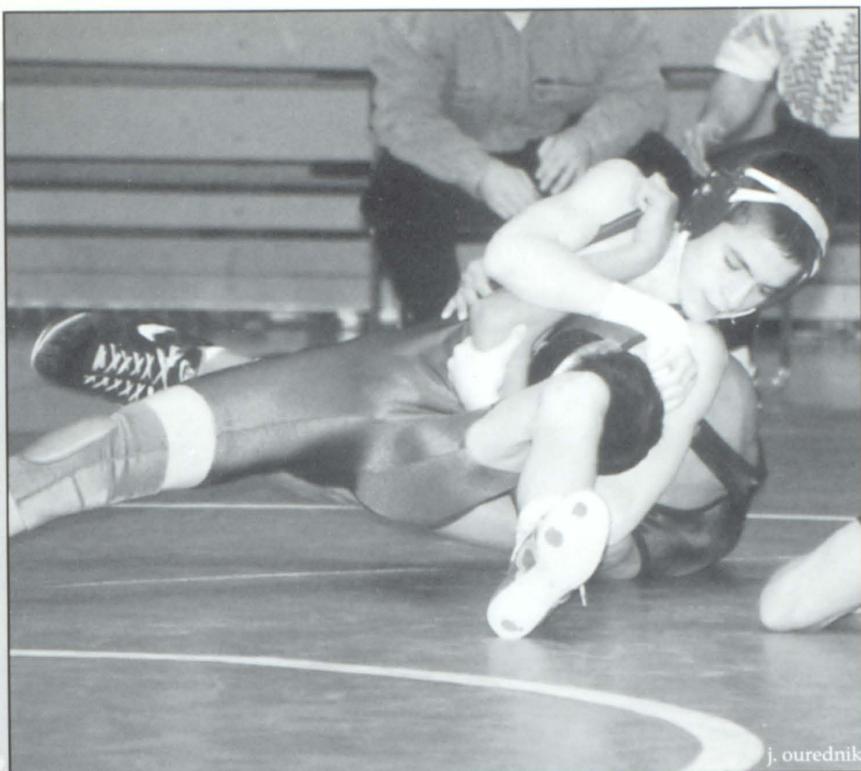

Two wrestlers traveled to the state tournament. Junior Vince Sessa placed second in his weight class, while Vinnie Vacarro, 10, met defeat in his first round.

Five wrestlers competed in the semi-state competition: Ryan Alb, 9, John Ourednik, 11, Crim Sartain, 11, and Vacarro and Sessa. Sartain commented, "I am happy that the team worked together to send so many wrestlers so far into the post season."

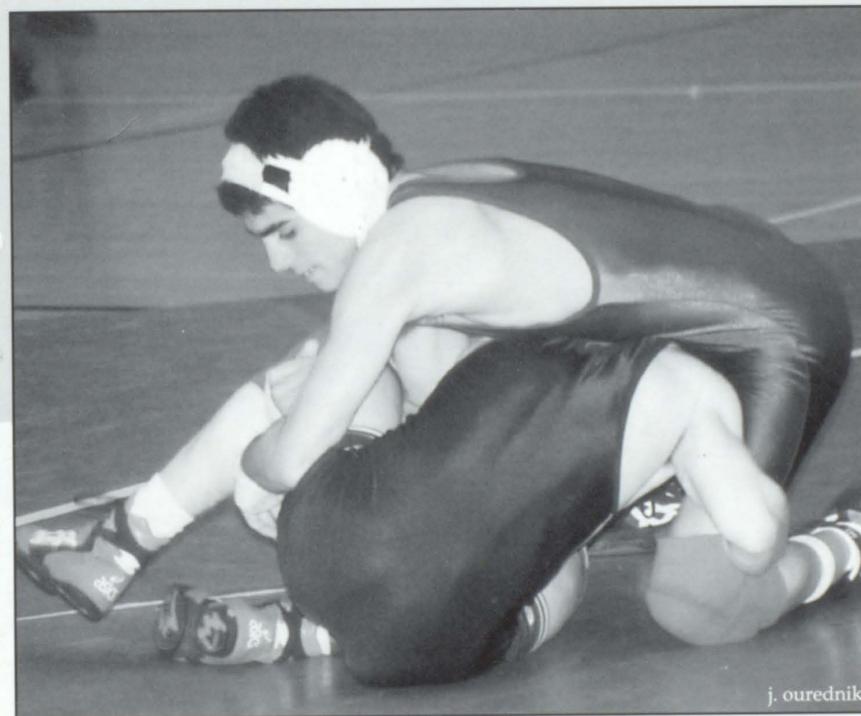

Jv wrestlers often made the most of seasonal opportunities to jump into the varsity line-up, filling gaps for injured or overweight wrestlers. Ken Bokodi, 9, made the most of his opportunity to replace Vacarro during the Hobart Tournament; Bokodi placed second.

these boys mean business...

Showing strong improvement this year, the boys' varsity basketball team finished 11-10. Even though they fell from state tournament competition in the first round again, they played stronger during regular season than the numbers admit. They showed poise by defeating teams who were predicted victorious, and they stayed close with teams considered way out of their league.

Problems of inconsistency weighed heavy on strategies. "Inconsistency was our only problem. If we could have played all of our games like the Crown Point game, we would have been a state power," said Kevin Murawski, 12. Varsity proved a junior-dominated team with only three seniors, and they lacked experience. Besides that problem, it seemed like a different player stepped up at different times.

Shooting from the outside continued as a team strength. The main man from behind the arc was junior Jeremy Hacker. His supporting cast consisted of senior Brian Fogarty and juniors Mark Sills and Brian Beier, who could all shoot the 3-pointer with confidence. The penetrating Chris Hill, 11, created scoring opportunities for big men Pesavento and Chris Joseforsky, 12. Responsibility for leading the team fell to senior Kevin Murawski, while freshman Nick Testa saw the chance to contribute quality time on the varsity level.

Nothing short of impressive, boys' jv basketball experienced a 17-3 record. Led by a solid core of juniors, this team counted on the supporting cast of sophomores and freshmen. Mr. Jack Birmingham thought his first year as the jv coach was a successful one. "They played very well together, and everyone played well at different times. That was the strength of our team," said Birmingham.

The team surprised their coaches with their team play and their togetherness. "Our coaches thought we were only going to be .500, but we proved them wrong with our great play," said vocal and floor leader Scott Whelan, 11.

The team outplayed their potential during a few season spots. Season peaks claimed great wins over Crown Point, Portage and an outstanding comeback win over Gary Roosevelt. Whelan said that the team showed great poise in the Roosevelt win, where they overcame a 12-0 deficit to claim another Indian victory.

Freshman basketball, also under the helm of a new coach, put together a solid season. Rookie coach Alan McGrath said, "We played as well as can be expected."

A-team finished their season 11-10, remembering a rousing over-time victory against Highland as the seasonal highlight. "Our win over Highland gave us great confidence for the remainder of the season," said guard Chris Sobh, 9.

B-team put together a strong season, finishing at 15-3. McGrath said, "I was very pleased with the stong play of the B-team."

Girls' varsity basketball so close to a victory...

Combining great talent, height and speed won't always pull out the expected outcome in basketball games, especially when you're competing against worthy competition. That is exactly what happened to the girls' varsity basketball team at the Lafayette Semistate, where great expectations were almost achieved but fell short in a 61-59 loss to Valparaiso.

Although the potential to seize a victory was definitely within sight, a defense lapse within the final seconds caused Valparaiso's star to make an easy layup and eliminated any sufficient time for the Lady Indians to pull out a win. However, seniors Beth Bonic and Kacey Hammel, along with junior Jaime VanderZanden and sophomore Kelly Komara, put on a spectacular show with every move, shot, dribble, and rebound they made, at the same time creating a nervous, nail-biting atmosphere for the gym packed with dedicated fans.

Speculation ran wide as this year's team, which replaced all the senior standouts from last year, was not anticipated to make it past regionals, let alone semistate. But the 11 girls proved the non-believers wrong after defeating McCutcheon 49-47 in the semistate semifinals and almost making good on their pursuit for a third consecutive semistate title, finishing with a final record of 22-3.

Jv/frosh girls basketball

making all the right moves...

Previously standing in the shadow of the varsity girls' basketball team, the jv and freshman squads just started to feel the warmth of the limelight. Ever since the varsity squad won the title of state champions in 1994, the jv and freshman girls have been shrouded by their success.

The jv squad finished the regular season with a record of 14-4. Star performances were turned in by freshman Lori Moore, sophomore Shelley Neitzel, sophomore Carrie Draper, freshman Cristin Hanyzewski, and freshman Dawn Linvill. Hanyzewski turned in the most points in a game for the season with 23 against Hammond.

The freshman "A" squad finished the regular season with a record of 15-3. Julie Lain commented, "I thought it went very well. I had the time of my life just playing with these fantastic players." Outstanding performances were turned in by Allison DiMichelle, Lain, Amy Reuth, and Marci Petzinger. The outlook for next season is good according to Allison DiMichele, "Next year the team will be excellent. There are many talented players advancing to the j.v. team."

The freshman "B" squad finished the regular season with a record of 1-6. While the "B" team didn't play as many games as the "A" squad, they worked just as hard.

What Happens in the Locker Room

Many athletes insisted on traditional pre-game preparations.

From wearing the same socks when they were on a winning streak to carrying a good luck charm, rituals were present in nearly every sport at LC.

Most players agreed that they had some sort of ritual they performed habitually before a game. Baseball player Neil Frendling, 10, said, "I wear a red belt and dinosaur glass straps to every game."

Senior diver Janel Benda admitted that she was really superstitious. Before each meet she insisted on have the same meal and sometimes the same breakfast. Benda even had a good luck suit she always wore to help her at the meets.

Rituals were not limited to just individuals. Some teams even started their own pre-game traditions. "We all meet in the outfield before varsity softball games and do a cheer," said Laurie Ritesma, 11.

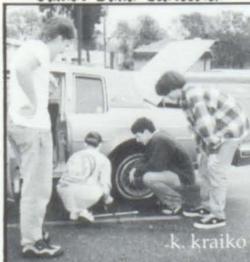

The beginning of each tradition varied among players, but most agreed rituals helped them feel more confident. "Doing a cheer before a game helps me get pumped before I go out on the field," said freshman Laura Smith.

Whether it was a lucky piece of clothing or a cheer before every game, athletes agreed that they would do anything or wear anything to succeed.

"We crushed everyone!" commented Gentry Bobo, 12, after contributing to LC's eleventh sectional win. Even from the start of the season, boys' swimming was right on top. They continued undefeated, losing only at state level. Only a team who could claim total contribution could experience such a season. "I feel the whole team contributed to our success," said Scott Lefko, 12.

Gruesome practices demanded morning and afternoon practice sessions. Bobo said, "Every day the team got to the pool and in killer practice after killer practice. I was dead every day after school."

At 5 a.m. it was difficult to get up and go jump into a pool. "I'm trying to forget about those days," said senior Rob Perschon.

strike three, you're out...

As baseball season began, fans and team members hoped to improve on the two previous sectional losses to Morton. The team, with a majority of juniors and seniors, claimed the necessary leadership. At the season's start, Jeremy Hacker, 11, said that the 5 a.m. practices were very trying though they would pay off in the end. Even though the players did not enjoy such practices, they concluded the majority of their practice during these early hours due to the constant rain soaking the field during the middle half of the season. Greg Walker, 12, the team's most valuable player, said, "We lost a few games this season because we were denied the opportunity to practice due to terrible field conditions."

Even though the team faced many obstacles, such as weather and rotating players around the diamond, they still managed to play impressively. The defensive infield along with the speed of the outfield made up for the poor offensive effort noticeable early in the season. As the season progressed, the defense and offense evened up, so the Indians began to play some good baseball. In the Munster Classic, LC proved to be very strong, beating a tough competitor in Highland and advancing to the championship game against Munster. In the final match the team lost to Munster but that evened the series out between the teams. Aaron Vela, 12, said that the pitching staff of Walker, Thiel, Ballard and surprise sophomore Jeff Sandor, was very tough.

The team finished with a 16-5 record, making them a top pick for the sectional victor. Mike Ulanowski, 11, a strong outfielder, said, "Our season doesn't start until the tournament, and if we lose then the season was a failure." Each team member felt that the team had potential to win the sought-after state tournament.

Baseball fanatics look forward to the spring months of April, May and June, months when baseball reigns as the elite sport. But spring in the region left baseball hopes squandering in the mud, as rain and cold weather prevented the splash a warm, dry season would have offered.

The jv record of 16-7 did not tell the whole story; jv won nine of their last 10 games, with that lone loss going to Lowell, who split the two head to head games. "We had won eight straight games before losing to Lowell, a team that we had beaten earlier in the season," said Ryan Early, 10.

Crown Point proved the last obstacle that the jv team would face. Even with the a couple bad decisions, the team came from an early deficit to defeat Crown Point 9-6. "I will always remember that game because I hit my second homerun of the year. It couldn't have happened at a better time," said Ryan Lesniewski, 10.

Crown Point's game was thought to be the toughest of the entire season by several team members. "It was the toughest because we had to come from behind 6-0 to win," said Gavin Crowe, 10. Jason Bates, 11, got the game-winning RBIs against the Crown Point team.

The jv team appeared impressive and talented at the plate. They managed to win four games by the slaughter rule, allowing a game to end if one team is up by 10 or more runs after five innings. The team maintained a highly respected offensive threat and included four players with better than .400 batting average. Barry Swisher, 10, Jason Bates, 11, Mike Flynn, 10 and Ryan Lesniewski.

Rob Koschal, 10, led all pitchers with an earned run average below three. Ryan Early, 10, also gave the opposition a hard time with his personal favorite knuckle ball.

Varsity girls' softball

falls to center grove 5-4 in semistate opener...

March 4 marked the first day for tryouts for the LC softball teams. Back from a long and successful 1995 season, the coaches looked optimistically upon both old and new faces. While the Lady Indians were so close to fulfilling their 1995 dreams of a state championship, those dreams were shattered as they fell short to Northview High School. For most of the season, this team showed their determination of attaining that target trophy only to be dashed in morning competition.

Bad weather plagued the battleground throughout most of the season. A total of seven games were cancelled along with many practices. Throughout the season, the team found that although they were doing well, the team would perform much better if the team came together and played as one. It was an absolute necessity to maintain tremendous team spirit as well as closeness among the players.

The team displayed a tremendous work ethic and ended their regular season with a record of 21-3. Unlike other softball programs in the area, LC faced a number of state-ranked teams such as McCutcheon, Portage, Shenandoah, and Mishawaka Penn. Many of the players stated that this made the season more interesting and more exciting. Kari Held, 11, said, "Many of the teams we went up against gave us a run for our money. We took some teams into eight or nine innings. It did a lot to prepare us for the tournament."

leading off for a win...

Lake County residents understand firsthand "April showers bring May flowers," but poor weather conditions provided a tough environment to succeed on the softball diamond. Bad weather and sloppy playing conditions caused cancellations, reschedules and delays. Lydia Carrasquillo, 10, stated, "The rain and cold weather made it difficult for the team to play to its full potential."

The season opened with eight freshmen and a few select sophomores and juniors comprising the team. Team leader Megan Kriss, 11, along with Lindsey Gordon, 11, and Carrasquillo maintained that the season began slowly because of all new players but they worked well together to produce a winning record of 16-5. The team's defensive effort proved consistent, allowing them to earn many victories in the closing innings.

In an Andrean Tournament inviting Griffith, Merrillville, Andrean and Bishop Noll, the team placed second after a tough loss to Griffith in the championship game. Paige Stephen, 9, said that the loss to Griffith was upsetting, but they knew they could beat them because of the regular season where the team played very well. At the end of the season, the players were satisfied with their effort and believed that the JV season had readily prepared them to transfer to varsity.

Girls' track

runnin' down a dream

Track & field is one of the few sports around that combines various aspects of skill an athlete can exhibit. The events range from sprints to shot put events. The athletes range from short to tall, freshmen to seniors, all competing for the same team. Every day, rain or shine, the track runners are outside practicing to build their strength and stamina. While the runners run, the field athletes practice their throwing or their high jumping.

All of the hard work must have paid off, however. The varsity squad finished first in all of their meets except for second place finishes in the Highland Invitational and the Lew Wallace Invitational. Commenting on their success, Rhonda Dohl, 11, says, "Those everyday 5:30 A.M. practices are very strenuous, demanding, and not always fun, however, at the end of the meets when we get that blue ribbon, it all pays off."

Given the job of guiding the girls' track team to victory is teacher Mr. Vassar. Lisa Pawlik, 11, comments on Coach Vassar, "Despite his demanding practices, his coaching techniques are logical, very helpful in attaining our goals, and are definitely understandable. Coach Vassar is an inspiration to the us and is a valuable member of the team."

Boys' track

going the distance...

Covering great distances no matter the weather, 2-hour daily track practices witnessed launching the shot-put and sprinting up the hills on the back road. Boys' track never had to listen for a rainy weather call-off--there was none.

Hard work, determination and self-discipline, already in place by the first meet, allowed the team an impressive show at Purdue University during the Bomber Boiler relays. Early impressions were positive. "Our team did very well at Purdue this year. If we continue to compete like we did there, we will have a very successful season," stated junior Nathan Thompson.

Despite such predictions, LC couldn't always spout out a victory. Strenuous efforts against Merrillville still fell short, although wins took the Lew Wallace and Calumet Invitational.

Field events boasted continued improvement with seniors such as Mike Lindinger as the season progressed. Ryan Estep, 11, who high-jumped, said, "I think the field events have come a long way, and along with the entire team have continued to improve a lot this season."

Varsity/Jv Boy's Golf

When the golf season opens in April, many people expect green fairways, warm weather and productive scores. That was not the case this year for the golfing Indians. The inclement weather caused cancellations and worst of all, very high golf scores. Jeremy Gorelick, 12, one of LC's top golfers, said, "The team worked hard and played better during the winter months than they have for the whole first half of the season."

The unique thing about this year's team was that everyone was about equivalent in his ability on the greens. Each outing produced a different top golfer for LC helping to show the talent that existed. Aaron Dudek, 12, said, "The season began very slow, but began to get better as it approached the end of the year." The team gained confidence when they placed second at the Rochester Invitational, beating two state ranked teams.

Although the team was known to play better at home, there were some good individual performances on the road. Ron Bodie, 10, placed a close second in the Marquette Invitational, losing in a third-hole playoff among three golfers.

As the season approached sectionals, the golfing Indians were expected to win the title against tough competition such as Munster and Gavit. After this, the team had to play to its full potential in order to travel to Regionals and possibly the state tournament. Andy Krop, 11, said, "The season was enjoyable because we all began to play well and enjoyed the fun times that occurred on the course and the Saturday morning bus trips."

Girls' JV/varsity tennis

a year of rebuilding...

ith a loss of almost the entire varsity roster from last year due to graduation, the girls' varsity tennis team definitely experienced rebuilding. Only two players, seniors Elainne McNally and Amanda Ward, returned with some varsity background to help the team achieve some solid wins.

McNally, the team's MVP, led the team at the number one singles spot, while sophomore Lexie Morris proved tough at the number two spot. Ward, plagued by several unfortunate physical problems during the season, took turns at the number three singles position with senior Erica Matson. Junior Andrea Pedtke and senior Krissie Clayton gave the area some tough matches at the number one doubles spot, while seniors Tanya Coker and Melissa Weaver played consistent at number two doubles.

And although winning was important, the girls also saw having fun and improving their game as top priority. LC tennis proved very competitive, although some scores did not reflect the great effort and aggressiveness that was delivered. "Last year the team lost a lot of key seniors to graduation, and that meant that everyone had to step up to a more challenging position this year," commented McNally.

One season highlight was the team's overall second place finish at the Merrillville Doubles Tournament. Clayton and Pedtke won all of their matches, defeating teams such as Chesterton, Merrillville, Highland and Hobart, while others also proved dominant. Another significant part of the season was the success at sectionals for Clayton and Pedtke at number one doubles, where they proved successful in several matches.

CHEERLEADERS

For the past several years, numerous awards were given to LC athletes for hard work and record-breaking accomplishments. One team practiced the whole year through.

Cheerleading tryouts took place in April and the selected members attended UCA camp in the summer. The cheerleaders placed second in the cheer competition, among other awards. Rhonda Dohl, 11, was elected jump queen, and Annie Hiduke, 12, and Erika Dembowski, 12, made it to London for the All-American Cheer Squad.

Two hour practices were held twice a week during football and basketball season, and every day during competition.

Led by captains Kristy Harger, 12, and Kim Kaminski, 12, the cheerleaders placed third in regionals and advanced to state. They also placed third in the Purdue Calumet competition in February.

Coaches make big impressions

hey're there to help you get better, they are there for you when times are tough, they yell some times, but they care a lot about you. Although these are all traits your mother and father possess, the answer to this puzzle is none other than... your coach.

While some that have never been part of an organized sport may wonder how this could possibly be true, having parent-like qualities are a must for success as a team. Contrary to what many might say about that job, these people take more slack than anyone, are stressed sometimes, and have a full-time job. On top of it all, they love what they do. They see kids grow from freshmen all the way up to seniors and then like parents, must bid them farewell and good luck in the years ahead.

Unity and the sense of accomplishment were some great reasons of becoming a coach. Jack Birmingham, head jv boys' basketball coach said, "Seeing the kids play together as a team and seeing the results of that are very important when it comes to being a coach."

What all coaches believe is important is the feeling of success that comes along with being a coach. Although winning is important, they understand that "it isn't everything" and that they must also believe in what a team is all about. All agreed that if coaches thrive on winning and forget about the parent-figure that come with the job, one will fail miserably. Whether it be football, basketball, baseball, softball, or anything else, you have to love the game... and the players that come with it.

no way!...

ree time? In a student's life? No way! Besides the time-consuming need to make new friends and the ever-present desire to see old friends, Homecoming floats went under construction, applications for jobs were completed and polished, and Prom gowns demanded pressing. Chores sometimes disrupted plans: "You're not going to the game until you room is picked up!"

B

irthdays were celebrated with enthusiasm. For many this year's birthday was the one worth waiting for: some were finally old enough to desert junior high and enter high school, others raced to acquire a driver's license, or for some, the magic age of turning 18—finally.

V

ocabulary was attacked while we devoured our lunches. Goals loomed important while kids determined the values they would attain. Even while worrying about a pending scholarship, basketball games were attended, and we worked, learned and lived through each day while constantly pursuing a regular teenage life.

d. hyman

Pursuing these teen years demanded most of our energy. While striving to accomplish good grades and a later curfew, we worked answers to the algebra worksheet and listened in to the gossip of the day. We reached for new levels in our priorities and for the next sweater in the closet.

Of course lives consisted of hectic days, filled with stress and worries, yet teens continually complained of boredom. Most were tired and greeted their teachers with gaping yawns, yet the days of special school activities and momentous events acted like a shot of adrenaline.

Whether lunch break or spring break, football or formal, the quest for the perfect student lifestyle was pursued with determination. Maybe a chance was missed, an assignment went incomplete, or a name was forgotten, but these trivial setbacks never stopped us from pursuing our ultimate dreams and goals or from searching for the next trivial tidbit.

Overcoming difficulties

Of course every modern high school thinks of itself as a kaleidoscope. LC, with its 2,500 or more students from diverse ethnic backgrounds is no different. Perhaps that's part of the high school challenge—or at least the high school education—learning to accept people from all cultures, backgrounds and abilities. These teens are learning about acceptance, too, from learning to accept and striving to be accepted.

Participating in regular program classes such as adaptive physical education, swimming, art, ceramics, wood shop and home economics, many of these students also hold jobs either at the school or in the community. Their jobs at school might include helping in the laundry facility, refilling pop machines, collecting attendance sheets, delivering mail and packages, and aiding in the school's library. Out-of-school responsibilities finds some of these kids working at the Lake County Public Library at the Scherererville Branch.

Physically challenged students also participate in the Special Olympics each year and have brought home many medals. They compete in swimming, bowling, basketball, and track and field, excelling and pushing to their own limits.

LC's program offers organized activities such as picnics at Lemon Lake and weekly bowling. Some students enjoy mini-golfing, snowmobiling, skiing, and water tubing. Many are active as peer helpers, helping others grasp the basics of card playing, computer basics and necessary. Peer tutors also help special students with academic areas.

Backpacks and other trends

Also known as the necessary survival tool for lugging books around all day to classes, backpacks were always seen on the shoulders of LC students in pursuit of reaching the next class in time. Backpacks proved a lifesaver for those who had a class in the freshman center one hour, and C-hall the next. From Jansport to Eastpack and royal blue to navy, backpacks played a vital role in the most important and trivial matters of the school day.

Did you know that 58 percent of LC students owned Jansport backpacks? Besides serving as a means for carrying books, these important doubled as traveling companions. They saved students extra locker trips and many times reflected the creativity of the individuals who designed them.

While a majority of LC students, 42 percent to be exact, opted for the ever-popular black Jansport, navy blue was also a popular color. Twenty-five percent carried forest green, followed by burgundy at six percent and purple at four percent. Picking the right color and design sometimes outweighed the normal trivial decisions for students. Junior Jen Platt said, "In my attempt to find the ultimate backpack, I found my journey to be long and challenging. But my searching finally stopped one day when I discovered a black mesh Eastpack in my sister's room. Then I knew my traditional navy blue backpack days were over."

Serving as traveling companions sometimes made it hard to depart at certain times, such as in the lunch line, where backpacks were not allowed. Backpacks provided a sense of friendliness for many and sometimes even served as a means for survival. Senior Shannon Anderson said, "My backpack is more than a sack. It lives upon my back and if you decide to mess with me it might be forced to attack."

LC students venture "Under the Sea"

Homecoming. Significant excitement as the first major dance of the year; a dance which was definitely not to be missed. Offering a new experience for the freshmen and an old favorite for the seniors, a "catchy" theme and decorative cafeteria celebrated Homecoming Sept. 30. But the success of the event would not soon be forgotten.

LC students were always in pursuit of fun and excitement, and Homecoming was no exception. After a shortage of tickets occurred within the first few days of ticket sales, many grew worried. But after some quick adjustments, the large number of students unable to grab tickets in time were not let down, soon being able to start buying their dresses and other outfits for the occasion.

And according to many, all the money, hassle and stress associated with Homecoming was well worth it. Such trivial matters never interfered with a good time. Angela Roznowski, 11, claimed the money she spent on clothes and other accessories was worthwhile. She said, "It only comes once a year so I go all out!"

Despite the football team losing the game to Crown Point, a bomb threat that caused much chaos and a cafeteria that felt like a sauna, the spirits of those at the dance could not be dampened. And while some wished they were really under the sea instead of melting in the cafeteria, the good time pursued by many was attained. Lyle Bright, 10, said, "The highlight of Homecoming was being with my friends, taking pictures, and going out afterwards."

Homecoming was just a small piece of the puzzle as one of the many experiences that form high school memories. Soon Winter Formal and other major events would arrive, leaving anxious students in pursuit of the next adventure.

Pursuing the latest fashions

Whether making that short trip to Southlake Mall, catching the latest film for around five bucks, or just hanging out at a friend's house, LC students were involved in a continual pursuit for the latest fads and entertainment. The diversity of students was reflected in clothing, music choices, even cars, as the LC population searched for the trivial details that added up to one important thing—fun!

When the end of summer neared and fall arrived, so did the start of school (sigh). Denim shirts, jean shorts and khakis were some of the popular attire choices before the winter months began.

Soon, favorite stores such as The Gap, Express and American Eagle fell victim to countless students in search of flannels, jeans and other winter necessities. Finally, after a winter that just wouldn't quit, spring arrived. And so did a lot of satin shirts, baby tees, t-shirts, and shorts on the bodies of students. Pursuing the latest fashion was always a priority in many lives.

But after students found something to look good in, hitting the best places—the mall, movies, parties, athletic events—was next during the endless pursuit. "Fear," "Seven," "Copycat," and "Happy Gilmore" were movies that drew big crowds with their suspense, comedy, or of course, attractive actors! Brad Pitt, Keanu Reeves and Christian Slater proved responsible for making hordes of girls' hearts flutter, while Alicia Silverstone, Cindy Crawford and Sharon Stone caused a multitude of guys filled with wishful thinking to rush to the show.

And who could forget the favorite songs and music groups of the school year? The same songs that proved popular on the radio were, well, attempted to be sung in the hallways by those who couldn't manage to get a favorite song to disappear from their head. Pearl Jam, Bush, Silverchair, Live and many other bands continually emerged as early favorites during the year.

But no matter what the new trend, LC always adjusted. Students eagerly joined new social scenes and experienced new forms of entertainment, and school acted as the center of our lives

Students feel the "Moonlight Magic"

Low temperatures, snow storms, and icy roads meant it was time for the annual Winter Formal. Stores were packed with students shopping for their dresses and tuxedos, each trying to make hers the most unique before Jan. 20.

The tickets cost $40 a couple. "I didn't think the prices were that bad considering it was about the same as last year's," said Stacy Scibor, 11.

The dance, held at the Serbian Social Center in Lansing, enjoyed the theme of "Moonlight Magic." Pictures started and 7 p.m. and the sounds started spinning at 8 p.m.

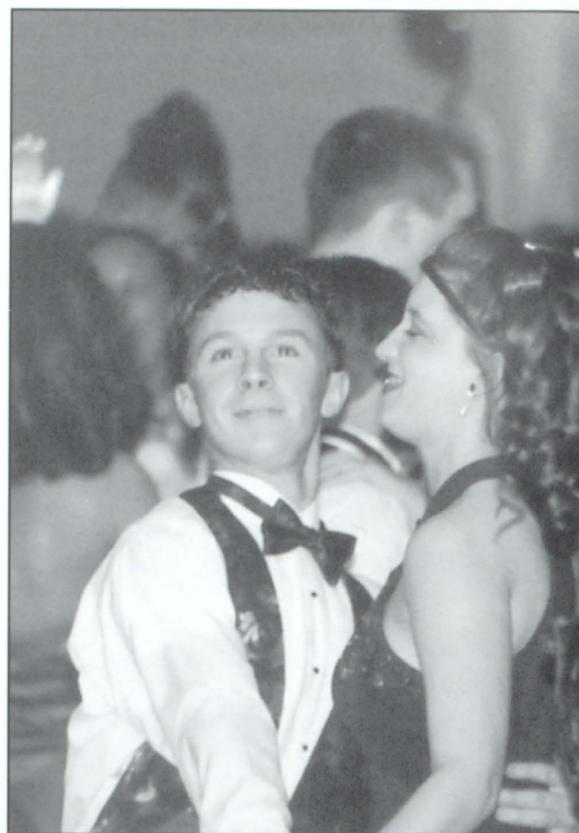

The decorations were set to a black, white and gold color scheme. Marissa Binole, 11, said, "Everything looked great and it seemed like everyone was having fun."

The music was supplied by The Music Men. A variety of the 70's, 80's, and 90's music was played. "The music was a lot better last year, but I was still on the floor dancing," said Kristen Lesich, 11.

At around 9:30 p.m. the Formal Queen was crowned; Anne Hiduke won the title. She and her date Doug Luers danced to "When I Fall in Love."

The dancing started to wind down at 11 p.m. but the night was still young for all those students who attended. Many went out for dinner or a night out in the "Big City." Some made a weekend out of it. Adam Taylor, 10, said, "Me and my friends went skiing in Michigan on Sunday."

Even though the dance lasted only four hours, the memories and the preparations were enough to last a lifetime.

Jackie Penn, 11, and best friend Andrea Schilling, 10, feel the excitement of Winter Formal.

"Out of Sight, Out of Murder"

One rainy night, in a house where a mysterious death occurred some years earlier, Peter Knight (Casey Andrews, 11) set out to write a murder mystery. A funny thing happened along the way, and suddenly, his characters became animated.

As Peter began his novel, a mysterious girl paid him a visit. She revealed that she was Lydia Dillingham (Mary Becklenberg, 11), the femme fatale of his novel. Peter was awestruck. Where had she come from? Why was she there?

Soon after, more of his characters entered the picture, each with the personality traits the author had assigned them. The ingenue, Kay Kelsey (Corie Dotson, 10) strolled in with her naivety. Cogburn, the droll butler (Craig Muenzer, 12), Addie, the pregnant upstairs maid (Megan Jones, 10), and Katja, the Hungarian cook (Katie Deflaco, 9) made up the servants of the house. A frustrated female (Jackie Lesniewski, 12), the juvenile (Jeremy Kiger, 10), and the psychic (Allison Felus, 11) rounded out the list of characters Peter had imagined for his story.

The plot soon unfolded. Kay's grandfather left his granddaughter a large sum of money in a will, but only if she found its hiding place. As the characters searched for its location, one by one, a murderer killed them off. In the process, Peter fell for Kay. While a murderer continued to eliminate his characters, Peter struggled with his emotions for his leading lady.

Private investigator Harry Monday (Jeff Beard, 12) arrived on the scene to solve the mystery. In the end, Cogburn admitted to committing the crimes because "the butler never does it anymore."

Beard admitted that he felt privileged to be in the play, revealing that his part was not part of the original characters list. "I was written in," he said.

Celebrating another year

One thing that everyone in the world has is a birthday, birthdays are certainly not exclusive to certain individuals. The rich, poor, weak, strong, black, white, red and yellow all have birthdays. Birthdays are irrevocable and have no expiration date. Best of all, birthdays are reliable, because they come around at the same time every year.

How people celebrate their birthdays is different from person to person. Some look to the traditional birthday party, while others stray from the norm for alternate observances. "Every year my parents take me out to eat in Chicago for my birthday. We always make it a point to go to a different restaurant every time," said Brad Shearer, 12.

Certain birthdays distinguish the social position of an individual. For instance, an eighteenth birthday signifies a great turning point for minors, who would now be considered adults. "On my eighteenth birthday, I'm going skydiving to celebrate. I won't need my parent's consent to do anything from that day on," said Joe Melady, 12.

Birthdays also mean certain traditions for people. Special china or silverware may be used, favorite recipes may be cooked or certain trips may be taken all to the birthday person's delight. "My grandma makes her apple pie every year on my birthday. She makes it year-round, but for some reason it always tastes the best on my birthday," said Chris White, 11.

Different birthdays have different significance for everyone. Some may look forward to their sixteenth birthday as the chance to drive, some to their eighteenth for freedom, and the chance to try many new activities that were once forbidden. Still some look at their twenty-first birthday to be the best of all. Go figure. "My best birthday was when I turned 17. My friends all threw me a surprise party and I was totally surprised. My parents tried a couple of time before, but I found out about all of them ahead of time. I can't explain how I felt when I was caught that off guard," said Jackie Penn, 11.

Leap Year

The 366-day Leap Year was authorized in 46 B.C. by Julius Caesar. The earth takes slightly longer than the 365 days long year that is commonly used (about a quarter day longer) to go around the sun. For the calendar to catch up, every four years a day needs to be added. If the Leap Year was never created, over time the seasons would start to get out of sync; summer would look like spring and fall like summer. Leap Day, an extra special, extra day, February 29, remains one of the world's most mysterious events. One of the ancient Irish legends holds that women were supposed to be assertive around single men on February 29. In 1288, the Scottish parliament enacted a law stating that a man who refused a woman's proposal during Leap Year would be fined and punished.

Jamie Reinhart, 10, is the only student throughout LC that is born on February 29, Leap Year. In reality, Jamie is only four years old, but her family usually celebrates her birthday on March 1st. The only time Jamie has met another with her special Leap Year birthday was in third grade.

"Pirates of Penzance"

A

ll Frederick (Brian Sherwinski,12) wanted to do was leave his home with the infamous "Pirates of Penzance" in search of a better life. Unfortunately, too many people got in the way of his departure.

Frederick's nurse maid Ruth (Allison Felus,11) refused to allow him to leave for she had fallen in love with him. However, Frederick could not return the feeling. He yearned for love from another, from the beautiful Mabel (Mary Becklenberg,11). Only Mabel's father, the Major General, (Casey Andrews,11) stood in the way of their relationship.

Ruth and the Pirate King (Jeff Beard,12) refused to accept Frederick and Mabel's love. They vowed to destroy the relationship so they devised a plan to keep Frederick from fleeing. Ruth had accidentally promised Frederick to the pirates until his 21st birthday. However, his birthday fell on February 29 during leap year. That meant it was only his fourth birthday! He still had 17 year's servitude.

Frederick was bound to the pirates by his sense of duty, but still he loved Mabel. The other pirates had fallen for Mabel's sisters. The General hired cops, led by Mike Gozo,11, to keep them away from his daughters. In the end, however, their love was too strong to succumb to the police intervention. Frederick could finally be with his beloved Mabel.

For Sherwinski, "Pirates" was his first lead during his high school career. "I was thrilled. It was an honor to be chosen," said Sherwinski. "It was the greatest learning experience. Not only did it improve my singing and acting, but it did a lot more. It helped to improve my work ethic and dedication."

"Imagine that"

At 10:30 a.m. students raced out from the school's parking lot. Flashing release forms to principals on the way out, they started their busy afternoon of getting ready for the big night.

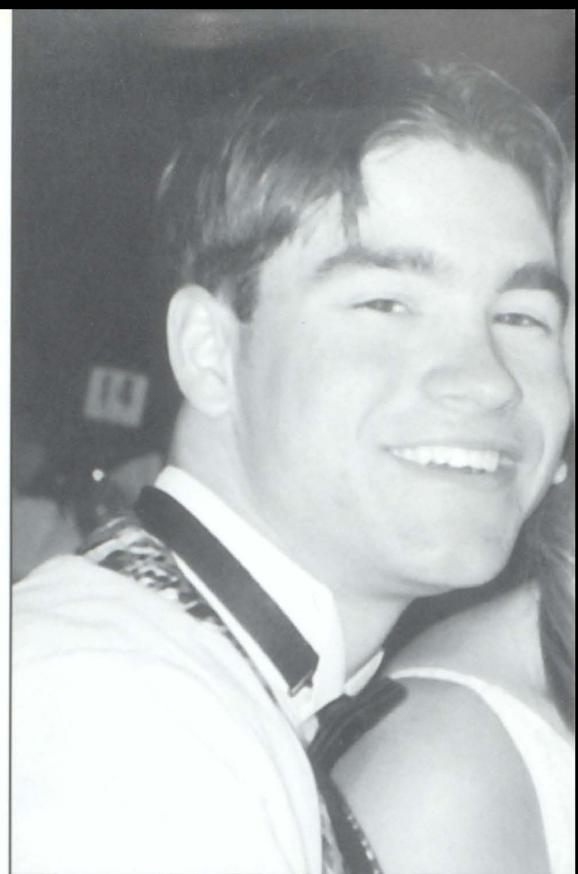

On the evening of May 3, the parking lot of the Radison overflowed with limousines and cars full of Prom-goers. Girls in their flowing sequins and guys in their sharp tuxes filed into the doors at 6 p.m. for pictures. After waiting patiently in line, couples sat down at 7 p.m. for a chicken and potato dinner. Chocolate mousse was served promptly after students polished off the main course.

The colors of teal and pearl draped elegantly across the tables. Live goldfish swam in glass bowl centerpieces, with burning teal-colored candles completing the scene.

The theme and opening song, "Imagine," started the evening off with a mystic introduction. Couples began to crowd the dance floor. Sounds from the last three decades rang through the room, and everyone started to dance.

At around 9 p.m. the Prom court was elected. Kate Lenz and Bob Pesavento were elected prince and princess. Shannon Anderson was crowned queen along with her king Brian Fogarty.

The tunes began to wind down at around 11 p.m. Each couple received glasses containing a teal candle as they approached the door. Prom night wound down captivating memories for all who attended. The dance was over, but the action packed weekend had just begun.

After Prom

The magical Prom night had ended, but the fun-filled weekend had just begun. After the wonderful night of dinner, dancing and pictures, couples woke up bright and early for the exciting weekend to start.

The annual Prom weekend consisted of Great America, Turkey Run and Chicago. Friends made plans on what to do, when to leave and where to meet. Most groups found themselves camping, canoeing, horse back riding, hiking and swimming at Turkey Run on Saturday. "It rained when we went to Turkey Run and people were throwing mud balls and wrestling in the mud," said Ryan Zentz, 11.

After the long day and a good night's sleep in a tent, LC students found themselves once again waking up early to head to Great America. The many attractions, such as Batman, Iron Wolf and the new Viper, drew hordes of students together. "The weather wasn't that great, but the short lines and cool rides made it fun," said Eric Ruethe, 11.

Some prom-goers spent the rest of their weekend at the zoo while others roamed the streets of Chicago. "Me and my friends went camping in Bloomington," said Alison Muntean, 11.

The last dance of the year and its trifling activities had come to an end. For some it was their last; others were making plans for next year. The weekend came and went, but the memories stayed.

The Ups and Downs of Driving

Driving to school was once again the "in" thing to do. People looked up to you because you did not ride the "cheese." Due to accidents and car repairs, the cars the students grew to love could not always take them places.

Students deprived of their cars' use because of repairs often took their cars to LC's auto shop. Andy Braatz, 11, took his car here to get his brakes serviced. "I took my car here because of the excellent labor they provide," said Braatz. As a result, he had to find another way to get to school while his car was being repaired.

Other people experienced less severe problems with their cars. Tom Toso, 11, went out to his car after school one day only to find out he had a flat tire. Toso enlisted the help of two women to change the tire. Dana Starcevich, 11, said, "Even though it took a long time, it was fun."

Unfortunately, many students were deprived of their cars for longer periods of time because of accidents. "Due to a couple fender benders, I had to give up my driving privileges until I turn 21," said junior Jason Bates. John Ourednik, 11, was another student "grounded" from his car. He went off-roading in his car and took out a couple of trees along with the whole side of his car... accidentally, Ourednik maintained.

Even though many students had unfortunate events with their cars, a couple of students kept their driving privileges. Crim Sartain, 11, was one of the lucky students who did not have to give up his driving privileges. "The only bad thing about driving all year is that I have to drive all my friends around that got into accidents," Sartain said.

Riding Shotgun

"To the Invisicar!" she shrieked, and only a rush of air remained where they gathered in the hallway.

Like Wonder Woman's invisible jet, some claim an invisible car. But while Wonder Woman's jet actually carried her places, students' Invisicars could reach only imaginary destinations. This make believe struggled for something remotely humorous in their otherwise horrifying situation—their lack of car, coupled with overprotective and paranoid parents who refused the use of their treasured minivan.

"Can't you just ride the bus?"

"The BUS? Nobody rides the bus!" Walking maybe, but many dreaded the bus. Students compromised, begged and pleaded to secure the ever illusive "ride." This constant need to insure transportation to and from school daily built some into world-class shotgun riders.

"If you want to know a real world class shotgun rider, you have to know John Troupis. He calls 'shotgun' even before coming close to any car. It's common knowledge that Troupis always rides shotgun," said John Warieka, 11. "You might as well call it 'Riding Troupis.'"

Being permanent passenger was not without its benefits. He who rode shotgun enjoyed automatic deejayship and got to sit back, relax and enjoy the ride. The shotgun rider never had to endure the frustrations of speeding tickets, but he was expected to give helpful warnings: "Cop at 12 o'clock."

Maintaining post as shotgun rider did present certain challenges. French fries and Cokes requiring good balance, making sure nothing spilled on the floor or stained the upholstery. Feeding the driver one fry at a time, the shotgun rider had to offer a sip of soda without sticking the straw up the driver's nose. He also remained alert for the ever-threatening old lady/fuzzy kitten/toddler on a trike crossing the street. Good judgment required expertise in striking the delicate balance between nonchalance ("Um, did we just scrunch that rabbit?") and hysteria ("Oh, my God! Look out for that flying leaf! It's coming right at us!").

The downside of not being able to drive the whole gang out on a Saturday night or never having the satisfaction of leaving LC's crazy parking lot on a Friday without hitting another car was over-shadowed for the shotgun rider, who could continually appreciate the benefit of being hauled everywhere without having to pay one cent for insurance.

Clark's class honors Veterans

Mr. Tom Clark's students experienced learning about the Vietnam War on a first hand basis. This year's students helped put the finishing touches on a nationally recognized project 10 years in the making.

On May 24, this year's group went to Indianapolis for the unveiling of Indiana's Vietnam and Korean War Memorials. Clark hand picked 27 students journeyed to Indianapolis as guests of Governor Bayh. The turnout for the event was tremendous. Over 1200 people including family members of soldiers, friends, and spectators convened on downtown Indianapolis for the unveiling of the two monuments.

The contributions that LC students made to this project was overwhelming. The student's found 120 names to go on to the memorial that the state didn't even know about. A few years back, the state appointed LC as the official researchers of war victims families. The Gold Star Honor Roll Project started out at 7 people in 1985 and has encompassed over 700 students in the last 10 years.

Mr. Clark is very proud of his students and the work they have done. "Many adults think that teenagers are unable of accomplishing anything," commented Clark. "It is just awesome to see teenagers do the work that many adults could not have done," stated Clark.

The students were also excited. "The ceremony made me feel good to know that I helped the families of the Vietnam Veterans," said Chris Zilz, 11.

Throughout the project students were required to make contact with family members of the Vets who lost their lives serving this country. Clark's students made contact with families all over the United States. "My students learned more from this experience than they ever could by watching a movie or film strip," said Clark.

Senior banquet: one final bash

For one final night, the Senior Class came together for a little fun, food and dancing.

Despite the inclement weather, over half of all seniors gathered at Villa Cesare for the annual senior banquet. The traditional meal of chicken, turkey and mostacholli was served to start off the evening, but the real fun came after dinner. Senior Class president, Kacey Hammel, along with officers Shannon Anderson, John Rattray and Nicole Crncic, presented awards to various individuals based on prior voting by the class. From the biggest brown-noser to best dressed, the Senior Class covered all grounds.

After the class cabinet completed the awards ceremony, the dancing began. Ellie Greenwell encouraged everyone to get up and move by being the first on the dance floor. Mark Antoskowicz soon joined her and everyone followed their lead. From hip hop to country to oldies, the diversity of the music appealed to everyone. Sarah VanGorp said, "Everyone was there having a good time. I was surprised to see that everyone was out on the dance floor."

Videos of the songs accompanied the music; however, occasionally, the DJ panned the crowd and caught friends enjoying themselves or hamming it up in front of the camera. Josh Holmes, who won the award for most likely to be famous, demonstrated his singing ability by serenading the class on Eric Clapton's "Wonderful Tonight."

Besides being a time to hang out with their friends, some found it a time to place a name with a face. "I think Senior Banquet was a fun and exciting experience that helped me meet people that I never knew before," said Kathy Ruiter.

Even though graduation loomed over them, seniors placed that thought in the back of their minds and enjoyed the evening, together one last time.

Awaiting future goals

The future was always a subject that crossed the minds of everyone. The exact outcome or steps to get to the future were not always clear in everyone's mind. High school offered a way of seizing students motivation for their futures and beyond.

"I really don't know what I want to do after college. I'm attending IU next year and plan to explore all my options. I've heard there's plenty to do in Bloomington," said Matt McGregor, 12.

After high school many students decide to attend higher schooling. State schools are often the choice for graduates, yet others yearn to travel long distances for college. Distant schools are often clouded with laborious travel plans. However in some situations, the effort is worth the payoff.

Beautiful surroundings and climates are some advantages of leaving Indiana to attend college. "UNLV is where I'll be next fall, enjoying the weather, atmosphere, freedom, and most importantly the education," said Tim Jocie, 12.

Other students choose to work directly after college. LC's vocational classes prepare students with other opportunities instead of attending college. The wide array of classes also prepare students for their livelihood after LC.

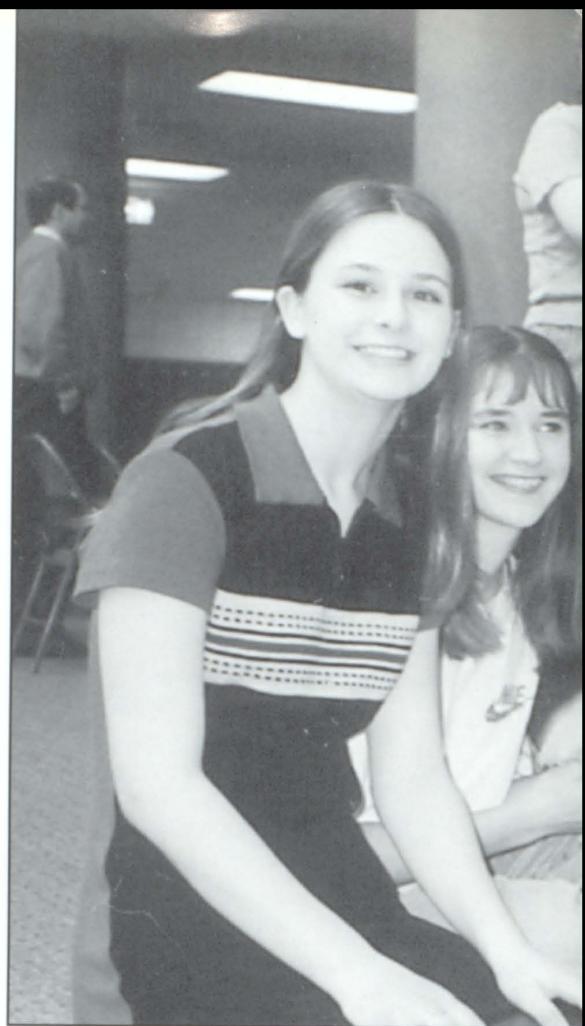

Senior Mark Hazard will be working at a machine shop after he graduates. "I always liked fixing things and working with my hands. I never wanted to do anything else with my life. All I want is to be happy and enjoy my job," said Hazard.

Once a career is established, one can now look to all the things he's wanted. Dream homes can be bought, sports cars can be driven, families can be made, and vacations can be taken. Hard work is the key to getting what one wants.

Some students already have ideas for retirement. "I'd like to get married in my late twenties, have a family, and then get old and live the rest of my life in Florida," said Jackie Penn, 11.

There are other students who didn't look quite that far down the road. "I'd like to have a successful profession in law. Once I finish all the schooling, I'll worry what to do after that. There's plenty of time until I reach that point," said Steve Miller, 11.

The future appeared controllable, so long as the right steps were taken to achieve goals. Nothing in life is free. The years in high school will help some decide on what they want to be in life. Others will decide in the following years and hopefully live happily ever after. Dare to dream.

Jon Moesmiller, 12, Allan Stotts, 12, and John Waricka, 11, stand atop M&R Diner, a local hangout for some, a place of employment for others.

Chicago served as the center of entertainment for students after Prom and Winter Formal. It was also the biggest source of advertisements on television.

Trivial

Topics...

What would the world be without advertisements? No commercials, no billboards, no pages of our loved magazines wasted and no signs in the outfield of baseball fields. No matter how annoying they seemed at times, advertisements made the world go round and sometimes entertained its audience.

Throughout the year, students could purchase a McDonalds cheeseburger for $.69. A taco from Taco Bell was a mere $.59. A small hot fudge sundae from Dairy Queen was $.79. Wendy's Biggie 32-ounce soda was $.99. And who could forget Checkers always boasting about their $.99 Champburger?

The school cafeteria offered the value $1.50 lunch in line 3. The specialty lines, which served some form of pizza everyday charged $2 for lunch and a pop. Assorted other items were available for scattered prices in the a la carte line.

School apparel was another outlet for students to spend their hard earned money on. Students spent a good portion of their income at Southlake Mall. There they could purchase a pair of GAP jeans anywhere from $32 to $44. A new store, Old Navy, arrived in Northwest Indiana. It was a branch of the GAP that offered apparel for substantially lower prices of its parent company, but with the same quality and fashions.

So many fads came in and out of style. The only way to stay on top of it all was by staying on top of advertisements. The repetition, the exaggeration, the over-played jingles. These wonderful effects may have seemed irritating at times, but in the end it all added up to making certain products stand out. Oh, and of course, after seeing a commercial 20 or 30 times, the jingles suddenly became just another tune stuck in your head!

Bad Boys Hoop It Up

Help during practice; tremendous moral support during games--those boys in the stands cheering the loudest were the Bad Boys. The girls' basketball team Bad Boys showed more than a passing interest in their sport. "We practice with the team because we can give them strong competition," said Ryan Blastick, 12.

Other Bad Boys were Tom Blastick, Greg Walker, Aaron Vela, Kevin Kluth, Tim Jocic and Jerry Kaufman. They helped by running offensive and defensive moves like the other teams might try to use. "I love working with the Bad Boys because they are aggressive and give us strong competition during practice," said Beth Bonic, 12.

Bad boys take center stage among players, cheerleaders and coaches.

Happy birthday, everyone!

Birthday celebrations ranged in variety from finding something unique to looking upon the special day as any other boring day. Heather Ruzbasan, 12, said, "My eighteenth birthday fell on a school day, so I took it upon myself to get a glimpse of the 'real' world as opposed to being confined in a classroom all day. I went to Chicago. I visited Loyola and dined at an exotic restaurant. I accomplished more in six hours in Chicago than I would have at school."

Others, even more lucky, waited and hoped for a surprise complete with friends jumping from behind the couch and yelling happy birthday!

The Thanksgiving Food Drive managed to raise over 39,000 items for the needy. The collected food was then handed to deserving families all over the area.

The items were also distributed at a dinner prepared by the Knights of Columbus. Attendees were given a free meal, a bag of groceries for home, and a chance to also take home some donated clothes or toys. LC students volunteered to help for a couple of hours on Thanksgiving morning at the dinner.

"I just liked helping out people that appreciated it. I'd like to go back next year," said Interact president Meredith Conaway, 11.

Traveling back in time...

Though most of LC couldn't wait for the future, that didn't squelch the yearly interest in the Feast of the Hunters' Moon.

Campfire smells along with clever crafts and great foods of yesteryear made this extra-credit event a delightful bit of homework.

Entertainment captured teen interest. "I went for the extra credit and stayed for the fest," said Cristen Lain, 11.

The grounds of Fort Ouiatnon near Lafayette continue to claim thousands each year to its festival, though most were happy to return to their homes in Twentieth Century conveyances.

Rhane Rheads, 10, draws a comparison of the modern hacky sack to the ancient Indian game played with a ball of clay.

Tales of how things used to be captivate Mark Muntean, 10. One of the positive offerings at the Feast of the Hunters' Moon included the living history orators, who studied the old ways to pass them down to interested visitors.

Red Ribbon Week is an annual tradition at our school. It is at this time when Lake Central students unite in the fight against drugs. Clubs and individuals all did their part in promoting drug awareness. Posters were plastered on walls everywhere, eerily reminding us that "our choices determine our fate" and others telling us to "Just say NO." Red ribbons were available to all students who wanted to pin one on their shirt and display their choice. Even though these efforts aren't meant to solve all drug problems at LC, it's a grim reminder to those who abuse alcohol and drugs that "DRUG FREE" is the way to go. A few students gave their opinions when asked what Red Ribbon Week meant to them. "Red Ribbon Week means to stop drugs or something. It doesn't mean much to students except to wear a red ribbon. But for me, I like it cause I'm drug free and proud of it," said Jim Crook, 11. "Not to do drugs for that week and forever," commented Stephanie Barth, 9.

Roland Shanks, 12, and Dan Cantu, 9, check out a Red Ribbon Week Poster.

Krishna Patel, 12, and Dan Strog, 12, show their spirit by wearing Red Ribbons.

Pet Peeves Annoy Everyone Some Time

*J*unior Herb Hilbrick demonstrates the fine art of annoying people in class by running his fingernails down a chalkboard.

The screeching of nails down a chalkboard, the slow pace of hall traffic, and the constant tapping of a classmate's pen. Who can forget how irritated we were by our classmates' ability to discover and aggravate our pet peeves?

People who flirted with your boyfriend or girlfriend was a bothersome habit with which many students had to face. Remember that girl who sat in front of you in English and simply could not stop twirling her hair? Maybe it was that guy who was behind you in German class and always let you know by incessantly shaking your book rack. You may have annoyed students without even realizing it by snapping your gum or biting your nails down to the bone.

Even the strongest people succumbed to the bothersome habits of fellow students. Habits that made people cringe certainly existed at LC.

Never A Bad Hair Day

Hair says a lot about a person; it also says a lot about that person's day. For most hair styles, simple adjectives show what the wearer is trying to create. Consider these adjectives and name the person who has that kind of hair: drastic, perfect, old-fashioned, comfortable, in, eighties...

Other hair styles demonstrate goals: Easy to manage, demanding a second look, or just napping. The return of the crew cut found favor from several LC guys who claim morning sleep was more important than impressing the ladies.

Girls opted for the shaggy "Friends" hair styles, and many greeted spring with a brand new haircut.

Up and out of the way. Mandy Murphy, 11, goes for the wild side of "done-up" hair.

Around the World

Yes, LC students loved to travel. They were satisfied voyaging anywhere because anywhere surpassed the Lake County area.

"There is never anything to do in St. John, or anywhere else for that matter," said Brandi Cueller, 11.

Of course many thought the tri-town area was boring and escaped as often as possible. There were those forever popular destinations like Florida and California where some lucky LC students visited.

Some students never went past the Indiana stateline; others journeyed to places that were miles away. Germany, Alaska, New Brunswick, and Australia were destinations stamped in many LC passports.

Juniors Kari Held and Suzie Ekaitis hide from a hurricane in West Palm Beach, Florida.

A boys' volleyball team?

One of the most popular sports for vacationing LC students was volleyball. Just about everyday, students, male or female were found playing on the sands of the local parks. One of the more popular places to play was Redar Park in Schererville.

LC did not have a boys' volleyball team ever. One probable reason for the lack of a team was the lack of participation. Nick Jutkus, 11, however, did not agree with that. He said, "There would be overwhelming participation. I know of about fifty kids that would come and try out."

Another potential problem could be the transition from the sand to organized indoor volleyball. Again the students did not view this as a problem. Beach bum John Warieka, 11, states, "I've played volleyball ever since I was five. I've played both types and there would be no problem with the transition for someone of my caliber of play."

Party Down

Classrooms filled with voices rambling about the weekend events. The most popular school conversation was "My parents are gone for the weekend!"

A once quiet house suddenly became filled with sounds of tireless chatter and varieties of music. People packed into different rooms of the house, while others tried to just get in the door. Pretty soon, dancing became contagious and everyone was grooving. Someone's parents showed up and the party was over.

The remaining people sat and hung out with friends. The night was over and the only thing that was left was the mess to clean up. Just another typical weekend.

Pursuing fun one last time

Trivia surrounded us, inside and out. Bombarded with 100-page reading assignments, 40-equation exams and deadlines for important orders—there was no escape.

The August start-up brought uncomfortable fears about just how hot the temperature was going to get. But hot, hotter, hottest remained a vague memory when January saw the mercury drop below zero and stick there. Four seasons became only something LC had read about, for there was no fall and there would be no spring. May continued winter with later than usual frost, only to jump thankfully into the high 80-degree range the third week.

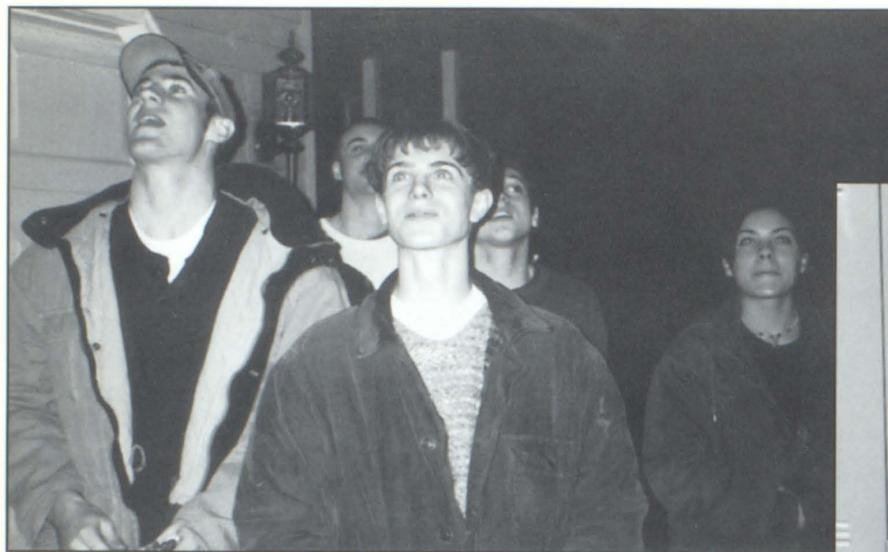

Reminiscing the year, just as much transpired outside the classroom as inside. Dating couples broke up, got back together, broke up again. Trends from the sixties and seventies resurged. New but lasting friendships began.

Trivial events dominated time and thought. After four years of doubting they would ever have to use those difficult trivial facts drilled into them by their teachers, seniors began to notice that uncanny fear that all that knowledge might be a necessity for their success. The realization hit: Pursuit of life is building and on-going, but trivia is the sugar that makes the medicine go down.

Students scurry to their cars during LC's only hail storm of the year. Several cars received severe damage that demanded much money for repairs.

Juniors John VanHaarden, Ryan Sekula and friends watch in amazement a comet that only passes every 20,000 years.

Taking some time to clean out his locker, Chester Pryselski, 11, discovers some things he never knew he had.

Colophon

Quiver, volume 30, was produced by the members of Quiver and printed by Herff Jones Yearbooks in Shawnee Mission, KS. Susan Taylor served as the yearbook representative and Julie Bogart was customer service advisor. Adviser Shirley Hewlett kept a watchful eye over the entire book with the help of co-editors Andrea Pedtke, 11, and Lynne' Colbert, 12.

The cover incorporated a 4-color design embossed onto white paper. The endsheets were printed on white paper using 4-color processing. Each of the book's 288 pages were printed on 100-pound Bordeaux stock. The first 32 pages were printed in full color.

Copy font was 10-point New Century Schoolbook with various leading. Headlines are in BrushDom Regular and captions are in 11-point BrandyScript. Copy and captions include a drop cap in Zapf Chancery. Photo credits are in 8-point Palatino.

Pages were completed on Macintosh computers using Microsoft Word and PageMaster 900, a PageMaker yearbook program. All pages were submitted on disk to the plant. All pictures were taken by Quiver photographers except senior portraits and underclass panel pictures, which were taken by John Giolas Photography.
